FBI Found No Disloyalty In Condon, Letter Shows

Portion of Hoover Report on Atomic Expert Not Quoted By Subcommittee

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The FBI found no evidence of disloyalty or subversive activities in the associations of Dr. Edward U. Condon with an alleged Russian espionage agent, it was learned last night.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover reported to this effect last May in a letter to the Department of Commerce concerning the head of its National Bureau of Standards.

That letter was the basis of accusations, issued Monday evening by a House Un-American Activities subcommittee, charging Condon with being "one of the weakest links" in atomic security.

Quoted "In Part"

The subcommittee report, issued in the name of its chairman, Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.), said that it was quoting Hoover's letter only "in part." A portion of the letter which was not quoted was a sentence declaring that evidence was lacking to indicate purposeful misconduct.

The full letter is still classed by the Commerce Department as confidential. Officials said they did not know how the House subcommittee had secured a copy, and the department declined to release the communication at this time.

But two persons who saw the letter and are known to be reliable told The Washington Post last night that they were struck by the omission in the subcommittee's quoting of the letter.

Context Is Recalled

Neither could remember the exact wording. But both said that the passage followed a section saying that Condon had been in contact as late as 1947 "with an individual alleged, by a self-confessed Soviet espionage agent, to have engaged in espionage activities with the Russians in Washington from 1941 to 1944."

Thereupon, according to one individual who saw the letter, Hoover added that there was no evidence that such association of Condon with the reputed spy had any character of disloyalty.

The other person recalled the sentence to say that there was no evidence that the association had any connection with espionage.

The subcommittee report, demanding that Commerce Secretary Harriman either fire Condon or publicly explain why he was retained at the head of a key Government scientific agency, created a flurry of activity yesterday.

19 Perish In London Air Crash

London, March 2 (AP).—Nineteen persons were burned to death tonight when a Belgian Sabena Air Lines DC-3 plane crashed at the London Airport.

There were no Americans aboard.

The plane was coming in for an emergency landing in fog when it nose-dived and burned at the end of a runway.

There were only three survivors of the 22 persons aboard. The survivors, all passengers, were thrown clear of the wreckage or pulled out quickly by airport employes alerted for the crash by a radio message from the pilot.

The others were trapped inside.

2 Bandits Get $75 At Beauty Shop as D. C. Crime Mounts

By Jean Reiff and Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporters

With every available policeman assigned to duty because of three murders within 72 hours, two bandits held up a downtown beauty salon early last night and walked away with $72.

The holdup took place at about 5:30 p. m. in Daisey's Beauty Salon, in the Hotel Annapolis at 11th and H sts. nw.

An attendant at the beauty parlor, Miss Velma Williams, said when the two white men entered one of them instructed his companion, 'Junior, you go up to the corner and wait."

Then the spokesman, flashing a nickel-plated revolver partially concealed by a newspaper, announced it was a holdup. The gunman took $30 from the cash register and $42 from a customer, Mrs. Edna G. Darr, of 1115 12th st. nw.

The gunman was described as about 25, 5 feet-8, about 150 pounds, with blue eyes and brown hair. The man addressed as "Junior" was about 30, 5 feet-5, about 140 pounds and had a high forehead.

Meanwhile, police yesterday flashed a "lookout" which indicated they may have come across their first lead in their search for the slayer of Meyer Meyrovitch, 39, found shot to death Monday night in his grocery store at 90 O st. nw.

The lookout was for a dark-skinned Negro about 40 years old, 5 feet 11 inches tall, weighing between 170 and 180 pounds and wearing a light gray felt hat, light

Police said the description was furnished by a neighbor who said she had seen the man lurking in the neighborhood at about the time of the murder and thought she saw him coming from the store.

The lookout added that the suspect was last seen running west on O st. at about 8:05 p. m. Monday night.

Anti-Lynching Bill Clears House Group

Rivers Urges GOP To 'Make Friends' With Southern States

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Anti-lynching legislation, one of President Truman's 10 civil rights points, cleared the GOP-controlled House Judiciary Committee yesterday over the angry protests of Southern Democrats.

One of their number, Representative L. Mendel Rivers (D., S. C.), took the House floor to urge Republicans to drop civil rights legislation and "make friends with the South."

"You are shooting at the wrong bird, because Truman is already a dead bird," Rivers told GOP members. "You will see that in the next election we are not going to vote for Truman. You had better make friends with the people in the South while there is still time."

Bid Has No Takers

Rivers' informal bid for a South-GOP deal found no immediate Republican takers. Leaders said the anti-lynching bill will be called up and passed by the House "in due course." On the Judiciary committee, 12 Republicans joined with six Northern Democrats to report it. Six Southern Democrats and two Republicans voted "No."

On the Capitol's embittered Southern front, there were these other developments:

1. A 12-man Southern "strategy board," formed last week to oppose civil rights measures in Congress and join Southern Governors in a Democratic convention stand, conferred for nearly three hours in the office of Representative William M. Colmer (D., Miss.). "No statement," said Chairman Colmer.

2. Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) offered to join Senate Republicans in cutting White House "emergency fund" appropriations. Russell proposed a cut after Senator Clyde Reed (R., Kans.) noted that Mr. Truman spent $50,000 of this fiscal year's $500,000 emergency fund for the President's Committee on Civil Rights.

Vandenberg Still Keeping Foot in Door

Not Presidential Candidate But Won't Commit Self on Draft

By the United Press

Senate President Arthur H. Vandenberg left the door open yesterday for the Republican Party to draft him as its 1948 presidential nominee.

The Michigan Republican refused a yes-or-no answer to the question whether he would accept the nomination.

He said it was impossible to give a flat answer without knowing what the future may bring. And he declined to speculate on "utterly improbable contingencies." But he repeated that he is not a candidate.

Exchange of Telegrams

Vandenberg's position—and a renewed request that his name be kept out of Nebraska's April 13 preferential primary—were set forth in an exchange of telegrams with Raymond A. McConnell, jr., editor of the Nebraska State Journal.

McConnell is chairman of a bipartisan committee which intends to enter the names of all potential presidential candidates in the primary. He telegraphed the Senator the point-blank question:

"If you were nominated by the Republican Convention would you accept?"

Vandenberg replied:

"I decline to speculate with utterly improbable contingencies. Your question defies intelligent answer without full knowledge of unknown ultimate events . . . I again request that my name not be filed for a position for which I am not a candidate. If it is filed despite this urgent and earnest request, I ask my Nebraska friends to confine their primary votes to others."

McConnell said at Lincoln that nevertheless Vandenberg's name would be filed.

"Since he has not ruled himself out, the committee will carry out its original intention of filing his name in the 'all-star' primary," McConnell said. "This is so that Nebraska voters may have a chance to show their preference among all possible contenders."

At-Large Council Plan Wins In Alexandria Referendum

Supporters of a plan to elect all members of the Alexandria City Council at-large won a surprise victory over advocates of the present ward council in a special referendum yesterday.

Complete, but unofficial, returns from the city's six wards last night gave the at-large plan 2757 votes to 1710 for the ward system. The present system was favored only in the Sixth Ward, where it polled 450 votes to 259.

As a result of the voting, the present nine-man council, which consists of six members elected from wards and three at-large, will be replaced by a seven-man council when the new term begins next September.

The at-large victory will necessitate a complete reshuffling of the line-up for the Democratic primary on April 6, which originally was scheduled for the purpose of selecting council nominees from each of the six wards. Instead, voters will select four nominees for council-at-large, to serve until September, 1949, with the three remaining at-large members o fthe body.

Three of the six present ward councilmen, who previously had filed for reelection subject to the primary, now will be required to refile as at-large candidates if they wish to remain in the race. Under terms of a bill which provided for yesterday's referendum, they have until March 7 to file their notices of candidacy.

Original deadline for filing was January 5, but the time was extended to allow other candidates

Friend of Clark Tells of $15,000 Fee To Get Mail Fraud Indictment Dropped

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Two attorneys—one a former campaign manager for President Truman and the other a close friend of Attorney General Tom Clark—yesterday admitted receiving big legal fees on behalf of four paroled gangster-heirs of Al Capone's Chicago empire.

Developments in the case of the four former hoodlums came both in Chicago and Washington where simultaneous probes into how the four won paroles are under way. In Washington a House Executive Expenditures Subcommittee is looking into the situation and in Chicago Federal Grand Jury is hearing evidence.

In Chicago, Attorney Paul Dillon, who managed a senatorial campaign for President Truman in the St. Louis area, said that he received $10,000 in legal fees for aiding the four to secure paroles.

Texan Got $15,000

In Washington, Attorney Maury Hughes of Dallas, Tex., testified that he received a $15,000 fee for obtaining dismissal of a Federal mail fraud indictment against the four, which paved the way for the former mobsters to be paroled.

Hughes said he is a life-long friend of Attorney General Tom Clarke, who recently defended dismissal of the mail-fraud indictment. Hughes said he had not discussed the dismissal with the Attorney General, although he had talked to others in the Department of Justice.

According to the Associated Press Dillon declined to tell reporters in Chicago about his testimoney before the grand jury, but he admitted before the House committee last Fall that when he appeared here before the U. S. Board of Parole he was entertained at the White House by President Truman.

Board to Produce Records

Dillon was served with a subpena yesterday to testify here again on March 9. The House group has summoned the three members of the Parole Board to appear today with all the records in connection with four paroles.

The House committee yesterday heard the former Federal District Attorney who prosecuted the gangsters testify that he had opposed paroles for three of the men because they were "vicious criminals."

The witness, Boris Kostelantez, now a private attorney in New York, named the three as Philip D'Andrea, Louis (Little New York) Campagna, and Paul (The Waiter) Ricca.

Kostelanetz said he had given "no comment" on the parole application of the fourth Charles (Cherry Nose)' Gioe, because the Government had not been able to prove he received any money from the conspiracy to extort money from the movie industry for which the four were sent to Federal prison.

Kostelanetz gave the committee a copy of a memorandum he sent

Economic Aid Not Enough, Ball Declares

Political, Military Action Is Demanded To Halt 'Avalanche' Of Red Aggression

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The Senate heard demands yesterday for American political and military action to check what Senator Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.) called "the onrushing avalanche of Soviet power-aggression."

Ball predicted that economic help to Europe wiuld not be enough to prevent a further "blotting out of the freedom of small countries."

"Without some parallel program, this is like asking people to build a factory on the side of a volcano that is still erupting," he said during the second day of Senate debate on the European Recovery Program. "Some way must be found to give these people of Europe some confidence in tomorrow."

Knowland Calls for UMT

Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) also said economic help would not be enough, although he announced he would vote for the full $5,300,000,000 for the first 12 months of ERP. He warned that it must be supplemented by putting the defenses of the United States "in first-class condition," by immediately enacting universal military training and by expanding the air force to full fighting strength.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.) said the Senate was "meeting in the shadow of a tremendous world emergency," and saw a strong possibility that Italy would be the next victim of communism. If such a thing should happen, he said, the type of action provided under the ERP bill would not be enough.

All these schemes of the Communist selzure of Czechoslovakia brought a cautious response from Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg of the Foreign Relations Committee. Vandenberg said he could not speak for the Administration and had no information as to its plans.

"It is indispensable that we moveswiftly to stabilize western Europe," he said. "I'm not at all sure that the possibility of regional arrangements does not offer something worthy of study. Security, of course, is at the base of the whole problem."

Sees "Electric Effect"

He doubted whether "political consolidation" in western Europe should be part of the present American program, since he did not think some of the western European nations "would care to hazard such an experiment."

He insisted, however, that quick passage of the ERP bill by the Senate would have an "electric" effect in encouraging the western European nations to resist Communist pressure.

"Nothing would strengthen their arms, encourage their hearts, put steel into their souls quite so much as to hear that the Congress of the United States, with expedition and faith, was sending them word that we were ready to cooperate with them," Vandenberg declared.

"And if they heard that Congress

'But Farmers Are Blameless'

Ice Cream, Milk Being Priced Off Market, High's Declares

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Milk and ice cream are being "priced off the market" here, the operator of a chain of 71 dairy stores declared yesterday.

But the general spiral of living costs—not the dairies or farmers—is to blame, said C. Y. Stevens, owner of High's Dairy Products Co.

Stevens spoke to reporters after testifying before the special grand jury which is nearing the end of its probe of a possible conspiracy to fix milk prices here or stifle competition.

Earlier, Edgar N. Brawner, president and general manager of Washington's largest dairy, Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase, said he thinks present all-time-high milk prices have reached their peak and will decline "if other prices go down."

After appearing before the grand jury, Brawner declared that his dairy has "neither agreed nor joined with anyone in any attempt to control the price of milk.

"Competition is active and always has been," he said.

"For many years we purchased a portion of our supply from independent dairy farmers," said Brawner. "The Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, however, gained more and more members until we found ourselves with only four independent farmers.

The association, composed of about 1350 farmers, contracts to supply area dairies about 90 per cent of the milk consumed here.

He said the association signed up Chestnut Farm's independent farmer-suppliers "in the same sort of attrition program the labor unions have—it's a closed shop, in other words."

He said his dairy's dealings with the association have been "generally satisfactory," adding, "we have had no special benefits from the association and have always dealt with them at arm's length."

Since the last increase in milk prices here, on November 1, when home-delivered milk was raised to 21 cents a quart, business has fallen off five per cent, Brawner said. But while retail prices have increased 50 per cent over prewar levels, prices to farmers have gone up 84 per cent, he said, actually reducing the dairies' profit margins.

During 1947, said Stevens, sales of milk and ice cream in High's 71 Washington stores dropped 20 per cent over the previous year, and "our margin of profit here has disappeared completely."

W. Gwynn Gardiner, a District Commissioner before World War I, and currently a lawyer and dairy farmer, said he told the grand jury he was "losing heavily" on his dairy operations in lower Prince Georges County.

Other witnesses who testified yesterday were Arthur Lee Thompson of Thompson's Dairy, who had no comment for reporters, and Paul V. Needling of Richfield Dairy, who was called before the grand jury a second time to identify documents.

Today's witnesses, last of those now scheduled to appear before the grand jury, will be representatives of Safeway Stores' Lucerne Milk Division.

Russians Are Willing To Hold Big 5 Talks On Palestine Problem

American Proposal To Form 'Committee' Opposed; British Reject U. S. Plan

Lake Success, March 2 (AP).—Russia accepted conditionally today a United States plan for the Big Five to try to solve the Palestine problem.

A shouting woman demonstrator briefly disrupted a tense United Nations Security Council meeting before Andrei A. Gromyko, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, spoke.

He voiced Russia's decision againts creating a formal committee of the Big Five powers for consultations with Arabs, Jews and British.

Gromyko said the five great powers certainly should consult among themselves but that a committee as such would only drag out a settlement.

[The Russian stand was interpreted by the New York Herald Tribune correspondent as a blow to the United States resolution which, it said, has now been hit on one way or another by five of the 11 Security Council members.—Editor's note.]

Britain Rejects Proposal

Britain informed the Council she could not join in the proposed big power consultations.

Gromyko said that "no one great power should hide behind a committee." He said the United States proposal for a Big Five committee to consult with the Jews and the Arabs was "artifically introduced" and could not be justified.

He said the Palestine Commission already is consulting with Jews and Arabs and there is no necessity of creating a parallel channel for consultations.

The five powers, he suggested, should talk informally and report back in 10 or 15 days.

He still did not give any hint on Russia's position on the international force requested by the five-member Palestine Commission to help carry out the partition plan.

Point Generally Avoided

Members have been slow to speak on that point.

Warren R. Austin, chief United States delegate, urged the Council to approve the American proposal, made a week ago at the start of the debate. He told the delegates that the United States supports the Generaly Assembly plan for partition but that it must be done by peaceful means.

Austin was ending his speech with a declaration that the Council must act if it found a threat to peace when the woman shouted from the public section, "What kind of action?"

U. N. guards spotted the shouter as a black-haired woman wearing a purple shawl and asked her to be quiet. She continued talking and a guard started to escort her out. She resisted, shouting: "Has an American no rights?"

With that, guards carried her out. The tumult caused the interpreter to halt the French translation of Austin's speech for about three minutes.

A man who sat beside the woman said she kept talking about peace

But 5 Oppose Military Pact

All Finnish Parties Agree To Negotiate With Russians

Helsinki, March 2 (U.P.).—All political parties agreed tonight that Finland would have to accede to Premier Josef Stalin's request for negotiation on a Russo-Finnish treaty.

But only the leftist Popular Democratic Union gave unqualified support to Stalin's suggestion for a mutual assistance pact, and five parties leagued in opposition to a military alliance with Russia or any nation.

Tension increased after President Juho K. Paasikivi prodded political leaders to speed their decision on Stalin's nine-day-old request.

Stalin asked the ailing 78-year-old President in a personal letter, dated February 22, to enter negotiations at Moscow or Helsinki for a treaty of friendship and mutual military assistance in case of possible future aggression by Germany.

Spurred toward a decision, party leaders went from one conference to another and scheduled additional meetings tomorrow. Only the Popular Democratic Union, which includes the Communists and controls 50 of the 200 seats in Parliament, had definitely made up its mind. It favored negotiations as outlined by Stalin.

This is the way opinion stood among "opposition" parties:

1. The Social Democrats, with 49 seats in Parliament, declared the "vast majority of the Finnish people oppose a military federation with any nation." But Party Chairman Enni Peltonen said Stalin's offer came "in the correct way" and there were no grounds for refusing to negotiate.

The party, which holds the balance between left and right in this crisis, issued a declaration condemning "Communist attempts to cause unrest" and simultaneously attacking the "shortsighted political fanaticism of certain rightist groups."

Although ideologically left-winged, the Social Democrats consider the Communists their No. 1 enemy, and many observers believed they would join the budding right-center bloc.

2. The Conservatives, with 29 seats, and the Liberals, with nine, were openly opposed to military discussions with Russia but were prepared to recommend negotiation of a treaty of friendship.

3. The Agrarians, with 49 seats, said the people opposed a military treaty, but agreed that Stalin's request for negotiations would have to be met.

4. The Swedish People's Party, with 14 seats, was seriously thinking of joining the rightist "bloc."

The "bloc" was just forming tonight. It would crystallize——or collapse——tomorrow when Agrarian, Swedish People's, Conservative and Liberal Party leaders meet to exchange views and possibly chart a joint course.

The four parties hold 101 of the 200 seats—a very bare majority. With Social Democratic support, however, they could beat the leftist demand for military negotiations and possibly work out a counter-proposal to the Stalin request.

New Protests Heard Against Naming Tamm

Witnesses Praise Personal Qualities Of Judge Nominee

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

The Senate Judiciary Subcommittee last night heard new protests from leading Washington lawyers against the nomination of Edward A. Tamm to be associate justice of District Court.

Mixed with the protests were expressions of warm praise from several witnesses for Tamm's personal qualities.

Tamm, assistant to the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, sat quietly at the committee table and declined to cross-examine witnesses who testified against him.

It was the second night hearing and the fourth session on Tamm's nomination.

Two Confirmed

Earlier, the Senate confirmed the nominations of Justices Harold M. Stephens and James W. Proctor to new posts in the United States Court of Appeals for the District. Stephens is now Chief Justice succeeding D. Lawrence Groner, who retired. Proctor moved up from District Court to take Stephens' place as associate justice in the Appeals Court.

Tamm is the nominee for Proctor's old post.

First witness against Tamm last night was John H. Connaughton, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations. He pointed out that the Federation had voted unanimously that Tamm should not be confirmed as a District Court Justice.

Speaking as a lawyer, Connaughton said "I'm opposed to the confirmation. I feel he does not

Steel's Defense Fails to Win Over Senators

Taft, O'Mahoney Dispute Price Plea Of Fairless, Homer

A Congressional committee took a poor view yesterday of steel industry leaders' arguments that their recent price increases were not inflationary.

In particular, Senators objected to the contention of two company presidents that the price jumps gave labor no cause to demand third-round wage increases.

The hearings, called to consider February price boosts in semi-finished steel of five dollars a ton, sional Committee on the Economic were before the Joint Congres-Report. Witnesses were presidents Benjamin F. Fairless of U. S. Steel Corporation, A. B. Homer of Bethlehem Steel, the largest and second-largest companies in thein-of Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corpo-dustry, and Hiland G. Batcheller ration.

Raised to Overcome Loss

Fairless said that the price increases were necessitated by increasing costs, which had resulted in "Big Steel's" selling semi-finished, tubular and structural steel at a loss.

The jumps did not constitute a general increase, he sad. They affected only 10 per cent of the corporation's sales. Steel prices in general, he continued, have lagged far behind those of other commodities.

"United Steel is a victim of inflation and not the cause of it," he said. It "cannot fairly be made the scapegoat for the Nation's economic ills."

His recommendation was th labor and management do eve thing they can to avoid high costs, and in particular, that there be no third-round wage increase.

All this appeared to sit badly

In Alabama Suit

Woman Asks Governor Folsom Be Named Father of Son

Cullman, Ala., March 2 (AP).—An Alabama woman asked a court here today to declare Gov. James E. Folsom her legal husband and the father of her 22-month-old son.

The woman, suing as Christine Putman Folsom, asked the Cullman Circuit Court to issue a declaratory judgment establishing both points.

She set out in the suit that she asked no money for herself or her child.

Governor Folsom, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President, was inaugurated in January of last year. He is a widower.

The 6 foot 8 inch Alabama Governor, who said he "kissed all the babies over 16" in his campaign for that office, was en route to Washington tonight and could not be reached immediately for a statement.

In a companion suit, filed by "James Douglas Folsom," through his "next friend," Carter E. Putman, the child asked the court to establish the "legitimacy of his relationship" to the Governor.

Both suits were filed in the equity division of Cullman Circuit Court. Kingman C. Shelburne of Birmingham is attorney for both complainants.

Father Flanagan Leaves Friday for Austria

Father Edward J. Flanagan, director of Boys Town, will leave Friday for Austria to study the situation of homeless children in the American zone there.

Professor Drives 30 Miles, Recalls Wife Was Along

Charlottesville, Ind., March 2 (U.P.).—W. J. Cunningham, 72, Cambridge, Mass., retired Harvard professor, and his wife, Ethel, 64, were driving home today from a 6000-mile vacation trip.

He stopped the car at Greenfield, Ind., to look at a road map. Mrs. Cunningham got out to mail a postcard. Thirty miles later the professor noticed his wife wasn't in the car. So he started back, calling the State Police for help.

While Cunningham and a trooper were checking back along the highway, Sheriff Jack Rubush saw a well-dressed woman walking along the road. "Are you in trouble?" he asked.

"No," she replied, "but I can tell you a funny story about an absent-minded professor." So the sheriff drove her into this town, where they met the professor and the trooper.

PEOPLE In The NEWS

Dr. George H. Ruhland

Dr. George H. Ruhland, with District health cares on his shoulders, has always advocated expansion of the District Health Department, not its contraction as was suggested by two surgeons here yesterday.

Ruhland

As District Health Officer, lack of money has been his theme song since even before he took over the post in 1935. He fought then for a higher salary and ever since for more and bigger appropriations on which to run the repartment.

That he was successful is apparent by a few statistics. When he took over in 1936, the department included but 246 workers. Today, the number is more than 2000. Appropriations jumped from $396,000 for his first year to 1948's $7,857,000.

Programs here for diphtheria immunization, 1936; pneumonia control, 1938; a communicable disease code, 1940; malaria prevention, 1942; venereal disease control, 1943, and the tuberculosis mass chest X-ray survey now on all sprang into being largely through Dr. Ruhland's efforts.

A graduate of Marquette University, he practiced in Wilwaukee where he later served as health officer. During World War 1 he was director of laboratories, Fort Sill, Okla., later becoming health officer for Syracuse, N. Y., in 1924. Thirteen years ago, he was lured to the District to take over similar duties here.

George Washington University even offered him a part-time professorship in public health and hygiene to make up for any cut in salary he'd have to take in the transfer.

He is 68.

Capt. Robert S. Bryant

A former soldier so young he missed the shooting in World War I has had plenty of it since.

Robert S. Bryant, old enough by the time World War I was over to know that he would like to become a policeman, realized the ambition and within six years won the annual Gold Medal award for valor.

Bryant

A precinct detective at 26—four years after he joined the Metropolitan Police Force—Bryant's career is dotted with man-hunts and with official commendations. Named to head a special force assigned to three new Washington murders, he faces new tasks.

Bryant was born in Georgia April 24, 1902. He first came to Washington with the Army in 1920, still nurturing the idea he'd "like to be a policeman."

He was appointed to the force July 16, 1924 and assigned to the First Precinct. He went to the Second Precinct in 1928 and made precinct detective the same year. By 1935 he was a detective sergeant and was named lieutenant in 1943.

His captaincy came in July of 1946 when he was placed second in command of the Detective Bureau.

In 1930, Bryant's gun felled a man who had pumped three into Policeman Van Doren Hughes when the two policemen attempted to stop him in a stolen car. Hughes retired from the department in 1937 and died in 1940 from after-effects of his wounds.

Helped Solve Poindexter Case

For his valor, Bryant received the Gold Medal award in 1931. His record also shows many commendations, among them one for his help in solving the Robert Poindexter murder in 1930.

A chain cigar smoker, Bryant's calm-spoken manner is seldom if ever ruffled by adversity. At 45, he is toward the "portly" but the rotundity hides his physical fitness. He has black hair touched with gray, wears horn-rimmed glasses.

With Mrs. Byrant and a son, Robert, jr., he lives at 220 Longfellow st. nw.

Should Dr. Isaiah Bowman, crowding 70, leave his post as president of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, that institution will lose America's foremost geographer.

Bowman

Prexy for 13 years, his specialty is the world in all its geographical aspects, physiography (land contours), demography (races and people), commercial geography (economics) and their sum total, geopolitics. In 40 years he's accumulated 13 honorary degrees, nine honorary fellowships and six medals for his talents.

Born in Waterloo, Ontario, he was but eight weeks old when his parents moved to a log cabin in eastern Michigan. He was teaching in public schools by the time he was 18, didn't begin his world explorations until his early 30s. By that time he had mastered the academics of geography and wanted to see it all.

His decision to retire should come as a surprise to many who have known him as a man who has no patience with coasters, people who don't fill their lives with work. He has always been a living example of his work-is-the-stuff-of-life principle.

During the war years, Dr. Bowman capably rand Johns Hopkins spending only a few days each week there. The rest of his time he gave freely to the Government, largely with the State Department, either in Washington or at the scene of international conferences.

The Gallup Poll

Marshall Plan Holds Support Of Voters Familiar With It

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 2.—Voters who have heard or read about the Marshall Plan, now being debated in Congress, continue to support it.

When asked what their opinion is of the plan, twice as many people who have heard about it express favorable opinions toward it as unfavorable.

There are some geographical differences of attitude, but in all sections the Marshall Plan receives substantially more votes of approval than of disapproval.

On the question whether the plan, if adopted by Congress, should be administered by the State Department or by a separate agency, the poll finds no particular crystallization of public opinion. The number favoring State Department control is slightly larger than the number favoring a separate agency to administer the plan. But neither scheme gets a majority.

Those are the findings of the latest institute test of sentiment on the plan. Growth of public knowledge about the Marshall Plan during recent months is shown in the following trend on the question, "Have you heard or read about the Marshall Plan?"

	Yes, have heard	No, have not
July	49%	51%
October	49	51
November	61	39
December	64	26
February	71	29
TODAY	79	21

All who had heard about the plan were then asked:

What is your opinion of the plan?

The vote today as compared to previous polls follows:

	November	February	Today
Favorable opinions	47%	56%	57%
Unfavorable	15	17	18
No opinion	38	27	25

The attitude by geographical sections is as follows:

	Favorable	Unfavorable	No opinion
New England and Middle Atlantic	61%	16%	23%
East Central	50	25	25
West Central	56	18	26
South	57	14	29
Far West	58	16	26

The issue of how the Marshall Plan funds should be administered was put before the country as follows:

Do you think a separate agency, headed by a man with Cabinet rank should be set up in Washington to have full control and supervision of the Marshall Plan—or do you think this problem should be handled by the State Department?

Separate agency	32%
State Department	39
No opinion	29

Attitudes toward the Marshall Plan in England, France and Italy—the three nations who would be the major recipients under the plan—were measured in February by three members of the international Gallup Poll organization. It was the first international poll conducted on the Marshall Plan.

In all three countries it was found that between 60 and 65 per cent favor the plan, but that many different theories are held concerning American motives in proposing the Marshall Plan. The number who think we proposed it for the broad humanitarian purpose of helping Europe get back on its feet is almost equally matched by the number who think our purpose is to build up foreign markets in order to stave off a business collapse here in the United States.

The vote in this survey follows:

	England	France	Italy
To help Europe, humanitarian	24%	23%	35%
Wants markets, profits, bolstering Europe to stave off depression	22	26	17
To stop communism	14	14	20
To get more power, imperialism	8	9	11
For own safety, to promote peace	3	1	9
Other reasons	3	6	9
No opinion	26	21	17

The polling was conducted by the British Institute of Public Opinion, the French Institute of Public Opinion, and DOXA, the Italian Institute of Public Opinion—3 of the 11 overseas member organizations in the gallup Poll international set-up which has been conducting international polls regularly once a month for the past nine months.

files of the Commerce Department's loyalty board, which last week unanimously found no reasonable doubt of Condon's loyalty.

2. It was learned authoritatively that Condon was cleared in December, 1944, for work in the Manhattan District, the Army's atomic bomb project. The clearance was issued when Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves was chief of the project.

3. Condon himself categorically denied even knowing, much less associating, with two of the four suspected personages mentioned in the Hoover letter as being Condon's companions.

4. Members and top officials of the Atomic Energy Commission told Congress that the occasion had never arisen to require a decision on whether to clear Condon for top secret material of the commission. The Thomas subcommittee report had made a point of the fact that the AFC had never cleared Condon.

Clearance Not Refused

The AEC's report came in the course of a closed session yesterday with the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, with other matters. The chairman of the group, Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), told reporters that the AEC representatives explained that while they had not cleared Condon, neither had they refused to clear him.

Hickenlooper said they had never had occasion to give Condon access to the most secret matters of the AEC, because his work with the commission and at the Bureau of Standards did not concern such data.

Hickenlooper said that while Condon was the scientific advisor to the Senate Committee on Atomic Energy in 1945-46 he himself had never observed any action or conduct which aroused any suspicion in his mind.

The chairman added that the committee was, of course, interested in the case and would watch its development, but that the committee "does not feel there was sufficient involvement of Condon in atomic energy matters to warrant" summoning him before it.

Stripling, Thomas Confer

The decision of Representative Thomas that he would subpena the Commerce Department loyalty report on Condon was made at Walter Reed Hospital, where Thomas is recovering from a stomach ailment.

Robert Stripling, chief investigator for the House Un-American Activities Committee, conferred with Thomas. He quoted the chairman as saying that he was unable to understand "how the Commerce Department loyalty board could have cleared Dr. Condon in view of the evidence."

This suggested that Thomas himself considered Condon disloyal. Yet Stripling also quoted Thomas as saying that the subcommitte "has no evidence that Dr. Condon is disloyal."

Stripling added that Thomas said there was "ample evidence that he has been at least indiscreet in a position in which indiscreation could have serious consequences."

Indiscretion Alleged

Indiscreation, it appeared, was the chief burden of the original letter from the FBI head to the Commerce Department.

Persons who saw it, other than those in the Thomas committee group, said that while it gave no evidence at all of disloyalty by Condon, and did not allege it, it was critical of Condon's security judgment. It implied that he was less than discreet in hs talk and associations.

In the portion of the letter released in the Thomas subcommittee report, the FBI said Dr. and Mrs. Condon had associated with Mrs. Joseph Winiewicz, wife of the Polish Ambassador; Virginia Woark, a clerk employed in the Polish Embassy; Helen M. Harris, secretary of the embassy, and Ignace Zlotowski, former embassy counselor.

Yesterday Condon declared that neither he nor his wife ever met Mrs. Winiewicz, and that he could not recall meeting Miss Woark. He said he knew Zlotowski and Miss Harris and had once had them both to dinner at his home, along with a former Congressman of Polish descent.

Hanes, Ex-Treasury Aide, Asks Tax Cut to Avoid 'Stagnation'

A former New Deal Treasury official, urging a tax cut, pointed yesterday to England, France and Italy as examples of "stagnation" caused by too-high taxes.

He warned it could happen here.

John W. Hanes, Undersecretary of the Treasury in 1938-39 and now a New York corporation executive, told the Senate Finance Committee he favored a "good, healthy" income tax reduction.

He said the cut should be general, and not just for low income brackets.

A cut in taxes for those in upper brackets, he said, would "revitalize risk capital, help maintain employment, and through increased production, lower the cost of goods and services to the consumer."

But he said the tax reduction should not be as large as the $6,500,000,000 voted by the House.

Senator Brewster (R., Me.) predicted the committee will vote to cut income taxes about $4,500,000,000.

Last year a four billion tax cut bill was passed by Congress. President Truman vetoed two ver-

This year's bill would cut taxes from 30 per cent for persons with the lowest income to 10 per cent for those in the highest brackets.

Brewster said he believes the Senate committee probably will make the reductions range from 15 to 5 per cent.

According to this plan, the House provision for a $600 exemption for every dependent would be unchanged.

Hanes, testifying yesterday, predicted the Government will take in nearly $20 billion more than it spent this year and next.

His 20 billion surplus estimate is far higher than the Administration's. But he said the Treasury has "revised their revenue estimates upwards" three times already and he does not have much faith in its current estimates of about 12 billion.

"Surpluses of the size that are now in prospect," the New York corporation executive said in his prepared testimony, "mean that the Government is taxing the people far beyond its needs," he added:

Escaped Convicts Mail Keys Back to Guard

Lenoir, N. C., March 2 (AP).—A Virginia convict was quoted today as saying he and a companion "felt sorry" for a guard they had slugged, and mailed him his keys and blackjack.

North Carolina Highway Patrolman Frank Kennerly identified a man he arrested yesterday on a stolen car charge as James R. Brinkley. Kennerly said Brinkley told him he and a companion slugged a jail guard at Danville, Va., and escaped, but after they got into North Carolina they mailed the guard the keys and blackjack they had taken.

Higher Meat Prices Foreseen In Rising Livestock Market

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

While grain prices milled about aimlessly yesterday after Monday's broad advance, livestock prices continued moving up, bringing predictions of higher prices for meat this Spring.

Livestock experts at the Department of Agriculture freely predict that the Nation is entering a period when much less meat will be available than in recent years.

An indication of the trend is shown in the weekly meat production report. This showed total meat production last week of 271 million pounds—a little above the 264 million of the week previous, but far below the 314 million pounds of the corresponding week a year ago.

Cattle slaughter last week, under Federal inspection, was only 221,000 head; a year ago the slaughter was 302,000 head.

Last week 879,000 head of hogs were slaughtered, against 927,000 head a year ago. In the same week 260,000 head of sheep and lambs were killed, or 10 per cent fewer than the week before, and 17 per cent fewer than in the same week of 1947.

Lower prices for grain will slightly increase the meat supply, marketing reports show. Both cattle and hogs are being fed longer and marketed at heavier weights.

On the Chicago market yesterday hogs were from 25 to 50 cents 100 pounds higher than Monday, with top hogs back to within $2 a hundredweight of their price before the market break February 4.

Steers also gained, with top grades reaching $30—only $3 under the peak on February 3.

Corn and soybeans were the chief performers in yesterday's market. The former sold off from 1 cent to 3½ cents a bushel, while soybeans went up from 1¼ to 5½ cents a bushel. Wheat was down about ½ a cent, while oats ranged from 1¾ cents above to 1¼ cents under Monday's close.

The stock market continued its upward movement, gaining only slight ground, however.

Meantime the Commodity Exchange Authority announced that margins put up by traders in the Nation's commodity markets were almost double a year ago. At the end of the year margins held by registered brokers totalled 192 million dollars compared with 99 million in 1946.

The total number of commodity futures accounts on December 1, 1947, was 28,099, covering trading in 19 commodities. The average margin deposit in customers' accounts was $6800.

Trading in wheat on the Chicago Board of Trade set new records during the recent market break, CEA authorities reported. Immediately prior to February 4 an average of 14 million bushels a day was being bought and sold. From Bebruary 4 to 13 the average reached 23 million.

One of the largest day's trading in history was on February 6, when 32,654,000 bushels of wheat were traded in on the Chicago Board alone. This was accomplished in spite of the market going down the full limit early in the day and remaining at the bottom the rest of the session.

meanwhile filed a report in support of the Ives FEPC bill, now on the Senate calendar. The report said both major parties are on record for a permanent FEPC and asked Senate passage "to close the gap between our professions and practices of democracy."

"Let it be clearly understood that this bill has for its purpose equality of economic opportunity only," said the report. "The opponents of this bill are confusing the issue by bringing up the question of social equality. We repeat, there is nothing in the bill concerned with anything other than equality of economic opportunity."

The report was signed by five Republicans—Senators Irving M. Ives (N. Y.), George D. Aiken (Vt.), William E. Jenner (Ind.), Wayne Morse (Oreg.) and H. Alexander Smith (N. J.) and two Democrats—James E. Murray (Mont.) and Elbert D. Thomas (Utah).

Post Editorial Quoted

The anti-lynching bill approved yesterday by the full House Judiciary Committee imposes Federal penalties ranging up to $10,000 or 20 years imprisonment against members of lynch mobs. State and local officers failing to make "diligent efforts" to avert the lynching could be fined up to $5000 or jailed for five years. Any community in which a lynching occurred would be liable for up to $10,000 in indemnity to the injured person or next of kin.

The bill was modified somewhat by cutting down the preamble, and making the bill apply solely to violence to a person and not to property

Rivers in his House attack on the antilynching bill called attention to an editorial in yesterday's Washington Post saying the lynching menace has already been put down and "this vote-catching venture has no place in the present sension of Congress."

Said Rivers, "I seldom agree with Eugene Meyer, for generally he is on the other side, but I think you should read this editorial."

Senators Question Steel Rise

with Senator Taft (R., Ohio), committee chairman. In a surprisingly sharp manner he took Fairless to task.

Fairless' argument that higher costs necessitated higher prices could be used just as equitably by any labor union to demand higher wages, Taft said.

Why, he wanted to know, in view of near-record profits by Fairless' giant concern, had it not reduced other prices, when it raised the prices of items it was selling at a loss?

Fairless argued that the price increases on semifinished items would not mean generally higher prices to consumers, because the steel fabricators who bought the semifinished materials could absorb the extra cost.

Vehemently, Taft told Fairless that his whole previous argument denied this theory, for Fairless had said that whenever costs rose, prices had to follow.

Taft told Fairless that he had "complicated" his forthcomings negotiations on wages with the CIO United Steel Workers.

Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), who engaged in a long and occasionally acrimonious exchange with the steel representative, picked Fairless upon a remark about United States Steel's "sad" profit picture. How, he asked, was the company then able to declare an extra dividend in December?

"Out of earnings, of course," Fairless snapped.

Homer, speaking for Bethlehem, said the increases might have been considered as contributing to inflation, were it not for the fact that the industry had previously "done our job to a great extent in attempting to reduce the inflationary spiral."

He was referring to the fact that steel prices have lagged behind other items.

Citing the rising costs of the industry, Homer then shifted to base the largest part of his argument on the plea that the industry had to expand and to replace facilities. For this, he said, good profits were necessary, to be used either directly or to induce new capital investment.

Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) observed that Homer had made an excellent justification, but pointed out that everyone could do the same, and show that "the brake to inflation" should not be applied in this case.

The spot to stop inflation, he said, "always seems to be somewhere else than where you or I stand."

Steel, Flanders added, seemed to him to be an excellent point at which to apply the brake.

Benes Studies 3 Courses Of Action

Prague, March 2 (U.P.).—President Eduard Benes, who has gone into exile twice during a 34-year fight for Czechoslovak independence, was reported tonight to be studying three alternatives for action protesting the Communist seizure of power.

A high official who had been in touch with Benes at his summer home in the village of Sezimovo Usti said that, as of last night, the President has not yet decided what course of action he will take regarding the new regime.

Three Alternatives Considered

But I learn that he is considering three alternatives:

"1. Resign and leave the country. This, however, would involve a certain risk. His age is against it, and he would not easily accept a third exile. He knows that his successor is ready and a press campaign to discredit him could be released at a moment's notice.

"2. Resign and stay in the country.

"3. Remain in office until the end of his term in 1953, perform the duties of his office, but give no overt support to the regime, which he considers he accepted under duress and which does not represent his idea of constitutional parliamentary procedure."

Resignation Denied

The official said that Benes is seriously considering the third alternative, "because he believes that by remaining in office he might serve as a moral rallying point for people in the country" who share his views on freedom.

The ministry of information today flatly denied foreign press reports that Benes had already submitted his resignation. Members of the president's official household would neither confirm nor deny the reports.

Benes himself was still in Sezimovo Usti, and could not be reached for comment.

Existence of Iron Curtain Denied by Finn in Interview

By Douglas B. Cornell
Associated Press Reporter

At the very moment that Communists were tightening their clutch on his country, Czech Ambassador Juraj Slavik said that "our main danger and political danger is still Germany."

Finland's minister, Dr. K. T. Jutila, said that "we have not a real iron curtain."

Both, in talking with Representatives Kersten (R., Wisc.) and Nixon (R., Calif.), said that democratic elements have been able to work with Communists in their countries and get along with them.

But for the future the diplomats made no definite predictions.

The two freshmen Congressmen made the round of embassies of seven countries living under the Red shadow. With a reporter along, they also interviewed diplomats from Poland, Yugoslavia, Romania, Hungary and Bulgaria.

They said they came away convinced:

1. That "cooperation with Communists means capture by Communists."

2. That "no amount of economic aid alone can keep Russia out," and hence the Marshall Plan must be reinforced with military alliances.

Satellites 'Fear' Russia

They agreed that the satellites and their representatives here are in "deadly fear" of Russia and are "compelled as a practical matter to be friendly."

They saw Dr. Jutila just before Russia made her move for a nonaggression pact with Finland. They found him more outspoken than most of the other diplomats, but he gave no direct answer when Kersten asked:

"Is it possible that something similar to what is happening in Czechoslovakia might take place in Finland?"

"The Czech situation is more severe," he replied. "I think the Czechs are mostly anti-Communists. Democracy in Finland is 800 years old and is strong. We believe that every man is as good as another or a little better."

A few minutes earlier, however, he had said:

"We have not a real iron curtain. We can speak freely and publish freely. I can't say how it will be in the near future. . . ."

'Very Difficult To Talk'

Slavik, former cabinet minister and veteran diplomat, was more reserved and obviously disturbed.

"It is very difficult to talk in the light of developments, to say anything definite," he remarked. . . .

But he did say his country still regards Germany as the chief danger and is fearful the Marshall Plan might result in rebuilding Germany's war power.

"If Germany would be in a position again to be a strong danger to the peace," he said, "we would be the first victims, because among Germans there is a very strong feeling against Czechoslovakia."

Answering a question, Slavik said his countrty offers the outstanding example in Europe of the attempt to make democracy and communism work side by side.

Kersten inquired:

"Do you think that in any other country, say France or Italy, where the communists have gained substantial control of parts of the government, it would be possible for democracy and communism to work side by side, or will they come to the situation you have in Czechoslovakia?"

"Certainly I think there is possibility of cooperation, especially on internal problems," Slavik responded.

He said that "certainly" there can be no cooperation on the Continent between American and Soviet interests but that each country might have to retreat a bit.

Kersten also asked Jutila:

"Are you able to get along and cooperate with the Communists?"

Jutila: "We are working with the Communists, yes."

Kersten: "Are the Communists the most powerful party in Finland today?"

Jutila: "Oh, no. The Communists have only 20 to 25 per cent."

Kersten: "Would you say that there is a trend toward more control for the Communists?"

Jutila: "I can't say. The election next June will tell."

Jutila told the Congressmen 80 per cent of the Finnish people are for the Marshall Plan—"if they could decide."

British Help Jews Repulse Arab Attack

Jerusalem, March 2 (AP).—British forces joined Jewish fighters today in a battle that scattered a band of several hundred Arabs, a Jewish agency source said.

Heavy rifle and mortar fire sounded in the Judean Hills 12 miles west of Jerusalem for several hours.

It was the first such action reported since the announcement by the British last night that they would use their armed forces "impartially against whichever side is firing."

British police and troops moved in alongside the Jewish fighters in the dislodging of the Arabs from hillsides which commanded the Jerusalem-Jaffa road, the agency informant said.

The battle started when the Arabs attacked a small military convoy on the Jerusalem-Jaffa road, and later a Jewish bus convoy. An 18-year-old girl was killed and two other bus passengers wounded.

An armed escort of Haganah, the Jewish defense army, returned the fire.

Jewish sources said uniformed Arabs attacked two settlements in northern Galilee at sunset but were repulsed.

One Jew and four Arabs were reported killed. The new deaths brought to 1533 the unofficial death toll since the November 29 decision to partition Palestine.

The Jewish agency had drafted no official reply to the British statement yesterday charging the agency with condoning terrorism for political purposes. Eliezer Kaplan, agency treasurer, commented in a speech that the Palestine government's accusations against the Jews "were merely cover for its inability to fulfill its own duties."

The British announced that due to the impending termination of their mandate certain mail services would be suspended. All incoming parcel mails from other countries will be discontinued about March 15.

In Damascus, Syria, a military informant said the Arab volunteer army had moved 140 mortars and several pieces of field artillery into Palestine for the fight against the Jews.

Czechs Bar 2 Issues of U. S. Information Service Bulletin

Prague, March 2 (U.P.).—Two issues of the United States Information Service Bulletin, reporting western reaction to the Communist coup of Czechoslovakia, have been outlawed by the Communist-dominated government, the United States Embassy announced today.

The embassy reported receipt of a letter from the national press court, that the February 27 and 28 editions of the bulletin had been banned and would not be distributed by postal authorities.

The bulletin, a digest of United States Government statements, press conferences and editorial comment, is normally mailed to more than 1500 persons.

Western Diplomats Meet

An embassy spokesman said that in addition to the formal ban, several indvidual readers' copies have been returned during the past week, marked "Refused by addressee," and that many other subscribers had written to ask that their names be removed from the mailing list.

The spokesman said that the February 27 issue of the publication contained American newspaper comment on the Communist coup and a report of a speech in Congress by Representative Karl Stefan (R., Nebr.).

The February 28 issue contained the text of the United States-French-British protest against the Communist seizure of power, the spokesman said.

Diplomats representing Western Hemisphere nations in Prague held a "get-together" today at the invitation of the Mexican minister. There was no announcement of what matters were discussed.

Reds Consolidate Position

A diplomatic source said that Mexican Minister Manuel de Negri had invited the chiefs of mission of Argentina, Brazil, Canada, Colombia, Ecuador, the United States and Venezuela to the meeting.

Meanwhile, the regime of Communist Premier Klement Gottwald continued to consolidate its position and to purge "negative" elements from the political opposition.

Government officials announced that the new cabinet formed last Thursday would hold its first formal session Friday, prior to the opening of Parliament March 10.

Simultaneously, the predominantly Catholic Czech People's Party announced that 12 of its deputies had been tentatively purged, pending approval by the parliamentry action committee.

Meat Shipments Sought

The People's Party deputies' club elected the new Transport Minister, Alois Petr, as its chairman, and voted unanimously to support the new regime.

The Communist newspaper Rude Pravo reported today that the government had begun negotiations with Poland and Hungary for immediate shipments of meat to supplement the meager national ration.

Mlada Fronta, organ of the Czech Youth Association, reported that eight houses of prostitution here had been seized by university students for conversion into dormitories, and that 22 others would be nationalized for the same purpose.

D. C. Night Club Owner Indicted On Tax Charges

Baltimore, March 2 (AP).—A Federal grand jury today returned indictments charging John O. Staples, Washington and Prince Georges County night club operator, with failure to file income tax returns for 1944-45-46.

The indictments term Staples "principal owner" of the Cabana Club in Prince Georges County, and the Five O'Clock Club, Washington.

The Government charged Staples' gross income for the three years was $41,631 and that no returns were filed.

The indictments said Staples failed to pay cabaret taxes for the Cabana Club in May, June and July, 1945 and for the Five O'clock Club in May, July and August, 1946.

and saying she did not want her son to have to go to war.

She refused to give her name to the U. N. guards.

British Colonial Secretary Arthur Creech-Jones told the Council in effect that Britain could not accept the American resolution. He insisted again that Britain's decision to end the Palestine mandate May 15 is "irrevocably fixed."

Creech-Jones said the problem was one in which all U. N. members must take part instead of just the Big Five.

Creech-Jones attacked the Jewish Agency for Palestine, saying it had taken "comparatively little positive action" to suppress "ruthless murders" in Palestine.

The Agency, in a statement to the newsmen, said it condemned violence and terrorism in Palestine but that its efforts to stamp out terror have been rendered difficult by the actions of the British mandate government, which it charged with interfering with Jewish efforts for self-defense.

Faris El Khoury of Syria attacked the United States plan at the outset as being contrary to the charter.

Lamarre Says He's Willing To Go to Jail

Grey-faced and haggard, Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers yesterday heard his one-time friend and associate, Bleriot H. Lamarre, swear he is willing to go to jail so long as he now tells the truth about the retired officer's harvest of war profits.

Meyers is charged with inducing Lamarre to perjure himself before the Senate War Investigating Committee about the former AAF material chief's connection with Aviation Electric Corp., a Dayton, Ohio, concern.

Lamarre, who finally changed his testimony to the Senate Committee, had entered a plea of guilty to perjury and is awaiting sentence.

Obviously weary, Meyers listened intently as Defense Counsel Robert T. Bushnell in a day-long cross-examination vainly tried to shake Lamarre's present story and in effect prove that the 36-year-old self-styled "dummy" president of Aviation Electric is not guilty of perjury.

Other Developments

Some of yesterday's developments were:

1. Lamarre denied that District Attorney George Morris Fay or other Government officials had promised that he would be let off lightly if he admitted perjury, and turned State's evidence.

2. Federal Judge Alexander Holtzoff told Bushnell that it is not the practice in this District for the District Attorney to make recommendations on sentences to the court. In New York, where Bushnell is in partnership with John H. Amen, the District Attorney's office, in accordance with custom frequently makes recommendations on sentences.

3. Lamarre said he had originally agreed to lie to the Senate Committee for Meyers early last October because he didn't want to get "hurt" in the investigation of Meyers' war contracts.

4. Denying that he changed his story because he was angered at Meyers over a splitting of funds when Aviation Electric Corporation was dissolved, Lamarre said he changed his "moral outlook" when he consulted his Dayton, Ohio, attorney, Robert C. Knee.

Finances Recounted

5. Lamarre said he had tried to get Meyers to pay him back $10,000 which he had invested in a Meyers' enterprise to buy in Government bonds, but he testified that he sent Meyers a telegram demanding the $10,000 back only after he had changed his story before the committee.

6. Under cross-examination, Lamarre admitted that he was out of a job for some months after the Aviation Electric Co. was dissolved and that he lived mainly on amounts drawn from the cash on hand when the company folded. He read part of his bank statements which appeared to show that he lived at the rate of about $500 a month during that period.

7. Lamarre said he had expected to receive $6000 clear when the corporation was dissolved according to an agreement with Meyers and didn't get it, but he brushed off defense suggestions that it was this disappointment which started his "animus" against Meyers.

The defense repeatedly pressed questions as to why Lamarre had lied to the Senate committee and why his "moral standards" had now changed."

Detractor to Testify

Lamarre admitted that Senate investigators had pointed out that if his first story was true he would have to pay a gift tax on the $10,000 he then testified he paid for the lavish decoration of Meyers' Hotel 2400 apartment.

He said he really didn't see why he should have to pay the tax on a gift he really didn't make.

"You didn't really care if you went to jail or not as long as you told the truth?" inquired Bushnell, sarcastically.

"That's right," replied Lamarre.

Mrs. Neta Davis, the noted interior decorator who recently redecorated the White House, is scheduled to testify today on how she was paid for beautifying the general's apartment in Washington.

T. E. Readnower, Lamarra's brother-in-law and former secretary of Aviation Electric, is also slated to testify for the Government.

to the Justice Department at the time the question of parole arose. It read in part:

"The convicted defendants are notorious as successors to the underworld power of Al Capone. They are vicious criminals who would stop at nothing to achieve their ends. The investigation and prosecution were attended by murder, gun play, threatening of witnesses, perjury etc."

After the mail-fraud indictment was dismissed the four were released from Federal prison last August. They had served one-third of a ten-year sentence for their participation in a one million dollar extortion plot against the movie industry which they threatened with labor violence and strikes.

Mystery Man Paid Fee

The House group failed yesterday to uncover the real identity of a mystery man with a liking for horses and diamonds who paid Hughes the $15,000 to get the mail-fraud case dismissed.

Hughes told the committee he got first $1000 from a man who gave his name as "Mike Ryan" but was obviously an Italian, and then later was paid another $14,000 in a bank around the corner from the Commodore Hotel in New York.

He said he knew little about the man who paid him the money. He described "Ryan" as "a dapper, soft-voiced man with nothing gaudy about him except he wore a large-sized diamond on his little finger." He described the free-spending mystery man as about 55 years old, with an olive complexion and receding hair.

Ryan told him, he testified, that he owned a string of horses and spent most of his time on the West Coast, although his home was in Chicago.

Cologne Mayor Named Bizonia Head

Frankfurt, March 2 (U.P.).—Dr. Hermann Puender, mayor of Cologne and undersecretary of state in the old Weimar Republic, was elected chief executive, or "oberdirektor," of Bizonia, the combined American and British occupation zones, today.

Dr. Puender thus became Germany's closest approach to a chief of state since the end of the war. Responsible to the bizonal economic council of 104 members which elected him, he was placed in charge of all economic administration in Bizonia and made chairman of the five-man "cabinet" of administrative chiefs. His political party is the Christian Democratic.

Communist council members immediately branded him as a puppet of Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York. They demanded rejection of the bizonal charter by the council and dissolution of what they called the "new dollar zone" or west German state."

IS THE U. N. DYING AS THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS DIED?

Sumner Welles Attacks Counselors of Caution, Says Holy Land War Would Realize Their Fear—Soviet Troops in the Middle East

By SUMNER WELLES
Former Under Secretary of State

It is hard to arouse a democracy to impending danger when the clouds on the horizon still seem no larger than a man's hand. Even Winston Churchill could not waken the British people to the menace in the rise of Nazism. The peril to us in Japan's aggression against China and in Mussolini's invasion of Ethiopia went largely unperceived. But even if the tragic lessons of the recent past are to be so easily forgotten, the clouds now looming are no longer on the horizon. They are hanging over us.

This government has repeatedly announced that the United Nations is the foundation of American foreign policy. Yet because of the failure of the United States to adopt a consistent and courageous policy on Palestine, the United Nations is today faced with the gravest dilemma in its history.

Save for Britain in the days of Baldwin, it would be difficult to find a more sorry instance of a major power refusing to face facts.

The decision to partition Palestine was taken after full investigation and debate. It was in strict accordance with the provisions of the Charter. The United States was in great part responsible. This country played a leading role throughout the events that led up to that decision

Lack of Enforcement

The American government failed however to insist that the United Nations must be enabled to enforce its decision, and to protect life and property in Palestine until the independence of the two new states had been finally established.

For lack of any United Nations police force, the members of the Palestine commission have now been told by the British that they will be assassinated if they set foot in Palestine. Major hostilities between Jews and Arabs are imminent. The United Nations cannot carry out its decision. Because the United States has during the last two months renounced every semblance of leadership, the smaller countries are increasingly reluctant to assume any responsibility.

The Palestine commission has at length been compelled to ask the Security Council to determine that there is a "threat to the peace" and to take action under the Charter. And Washington still remains silent.

It is notorious that there is a sharp cleavage of opinion within the government. The Army and Navy, supported by some officials of the State Department and of other departments, insist that the United States must take no action to back up its words. They allege that our growing controversy with Russia makes it unwise for us further to antagonize the Arab states or jeopardize this country's access to Middle Eastern oil.

Soviet Troops?

Such arguments are wholly unconvincing. The British government cannot prolong its mandate in Palestine. Once British forces withdraw, war will result unless the United Nations can send an international constabulary to Palestine. If hostilities break out, the Soviet Union will undoubtedly insist that its vital interests require it to send its own forces to maintain order in its neighborhood.

Should our service departments prevail upon the Administration to refuse to exercise any leadership within the United Nations to maintain peace in Palestine, they will pave the way for what they fear most, namely, the extension of Soviet control over the Middle East.

The arguments on oil are just as unrealistic. If a new war breaks out, the Middle Eastern oil resources would certainly not be available to western Europe nor to the United States. Should peace be preserved, since the Arab governments depend upon the royalties from their oil concessions, they are hardly likely to oppose their exploitation.

But we are face to face with a far more fundamental issue.

Japan defied the League of Nations in 1932 and was permitted by the great powers to do so with impunity. The Italian aggression against Ethiopia, the civil war in Spain, and the rape by Hitler of Austria and of Czechoslovakia were the inevitable result.

The Arab states have now defied the United Nations.

U. S.-Soviet Concurrence

The partition of Palestine is the one major question upon which the policies of the United States and of the Soviet Union have coincided. Yet this government has so far failed to initiate any measures within the United Nations to guard against the Arab aggression which is under way, or even to protest the flagrant violation of their Charter commitments by the Arab states.

If the United Nations is, in fact, the foundation of American policy, the United States must support the United Nations, not only when that is convenient and easy, but quite as much so when such support implies effort, sacrifice and risk.

The League of Nations collapsed because the major powers then members of the League supported the League only when it suited their own ends. They failed to support the League when it seemed that their selfish interests might be prejudiced.

We are seeing exactly the same trend. The Palestine question is a test case. Should the United States persist in its present blind inaction it will be preparing the way for the failure of the new international organization. And if the United Nations fails, the one hope humanity today possesses for the rule of law rather than the rule of force, for the freedom and progress of mankind, and for the establishment of a peaceful world order will vanish with it.

Fly Attacks Radio Stations' Plea to Broadcast Own 'Editorials'

The radio industry should not be allowed to "grind its own ax" over the air, former chairman James L. Fly told the Federal Communications Commission today.

Occupying a witness chair, Fly defended the "no editorializing" rule which became FCC policy during his five-year regime in the commission.

"The individual broadcaster, in his individual capacity, s free to speak his mind on any subject under the law," Fly testified.

"He is not free to speak his mind, to the exclusion of others, through the medium of broadcasting and over a station which he operates through temporary and conditional possession of a license."

Fly now is an attorney in New York. His clients include radio companies, but his appearance here was in behalf of the American Civil Liberties Union.

It capped a day in which FCC —now trying to decide whether to reverse itself—heard the first substantial opposition to any change in its policy. The FCC's 1941 "Mayflower decision" forbids the management of stations or networks—but not news commentators—from taking sides in politics or on controversial issues.

Networks Want Change

The presidents of three major networks opened the hearing on Monday by asking that FCC scrap the policy. They asked the same editorial freedom as newspapers.

But Fly said freedom of speech is better served by requiring radio to give the public "unrestricted access to all point sof view."

The wish to editorialize, he said, is largely "an illusion of green pastures on the part of broadcasters—they 'want to be like newspapers.'"

"I wonder if they really want to sink to the comparatively impotent level of the daily press," Fly said.

Radio's potential influence on public opinion "is not merely dynamite, it is atomic," Fly asserted. "Have we forgotten," he asked, "the impact on public opinion of Roosevelt, Long and O'Daniel? What newspaperman has had a comparable 'influence on public opinion?'"

Another witness took a middle position between advocates and opponents of the Mayflower doctrine. He was Nathan Straus, president of WMCA, New York.

He suggested that the FCC allow radio stations 15 minutes a day of taking sides on public issues. The stations should be required, he said, to give like air time to people with contrary views.

Any station owner, Straus said, "can circumvent the Mayflower decision by hiding his advocacy of causes and issues behind hired hands whose opinions, shall we say, happen to coincide with his won." He was referring to radio commentators.

If the owner gets out of radio and into a "cigarette factory or a patent medicine business," Straus went on, he has full freedom to editorialize.

Refers to McCormick Talks

Straus named the Chicago Theater of the Air as "another oddity" of the present ruling. The weekly program of Station WGN regularly carries a speech by Col. Robert McCormick, editor and publisher of the Chicago Tribune.

Straus said the station owner expresses "emphatic views on all sorts of matters," and the editorial is carried by many other stations.

"Since the FCC has never interferred, it must be assumed that his editorial is not in conflict with the Mayflower decision," Straus said. "Frankly, I am at a loss to understand why."

Straus said that in 1277 cities there is only one newspaper, or two newspapers under the same ownership.

Senator Jenner Reported 'Available' to GOP for Indiana Governorship Race

Senator William E. Jenner (R., Ind.) last night was reported "available" for Indiana GOP gubernatorial nomination despite an unprecedented warning by Hoosier State Republican editors.

Jenner

A resolution recently adopted by the Indiana Republican Editorial Association rapped factional differences within the State's GOP leadership and called on Jenner to serve out the four-year balance of his six-year Senate term.

Jenner, confined to his home with a sinus infection, remained silent, but an associate of the Senator said he will do nothing to discourage "draft Jenner" efforts in his behalf.

The Indiana editors said Jenner obligated himself to serve out his Senate term when he took the nomination away from former Senator Willis, Angola, Ind., editor, four years ago. They said Indiana Republicans have not "reached such a low ebb that we have only one man who can head our ticket in a victorious campaign."

Jenner presumably will hold on to his Senate seat and appoint his successor if elected Governor. 1948 overtones are reportedly involved in his continuing feud with Ralph F. Gates, incumbent Governor, with Jenner inclining to Thomas E. Dewey and Gates to Robert A. Taft.

In any event, House Republican Leader Charles A. Halleck (R., Ind.), who has kept out of the fracas, is expected to win the State's favorite son indorsement when Indiana Republicans convene on June 11.

The Hoosier editors swung at nearly everyone highly placed in State Republican politics except Halleck.

1. They said the office of national committeeman should not be vested in any elected official and called on Governor Gates to resign as national committeeman.

2. They charged, "under-cover influence" in the State by Robert W. Lyons, Washington lawyer, who has represented chain store interests. Lyons allegedly was prominent in the Ku Klux Klan in Indiana after the first world war.

3. They denounced what they said was "dictation" of candidate slates at the last two conventions by the State central committee, former State Chairman John Lauer, and the present State chairman, Clark Springer.

Lyons yesterday denied "definitely and emphatically" that he is promoting Jenner "for governor or any other officer" in an interview with Associated Press. He said Jenner is "a fine Senator" but he did not know whether he would be a candidate.

Lyons added that he hadn't any comment "except amusement" regarding the Republican editors' charge of undercover influence.

"I haven't been in Indiana 10 days in any year in the last three years," he said. "I never saw a fellow who could be an absentee politician. I am not trying to control or influence politics in Indiana. It would be impossible for me to make any contribution in the fragments of time I spend there."

The Indiana State election commission meanwhile announced a series of rulings designed to head off deals and horsetrading at either the Republican or Democratic State conventions. Instead of the old practice of the county chairman poling the delegation, all balloting will be by voting machines and so secret "that no person can see how any delegate votes."

Another ruling barred any delegate from holding the proxy of another delegate. Instead of the old practice of starting at the head of the ticket and calling the roll of counties, which lent itself to bandwagon devices, no one will know who is leading until the final tabulation is announced.

Political and Military Aid For Europe Asked by Ball had declined to approve this program, how long would it be before the Iron Curtain came down to the very beachheads of the Atlantic?"

"Gallant Fight" Lauded

Again and again Vandenberg expressed his admiration for what he called the "gallant fight" of the western European nations for survival. He said their staunchness in the face of the Soviet threat was "amazing," and once he called them "the bravest people on the face of the earth in view of the struggles they are making at this moment."

Senator James F. Kem (R., Mo.) wondered whether Vandenberg could give "a reasonable assurance that if we pass this bill it will halt the flow of communism."

"Can the Senator give me any "reasonable assurance" of what the plans of the Politburo are tonight?" Vandenberg shot back. "If he can, then I'll gladly reciprocate."

Vandenberg turned back repeated efforts from the floor to limit the authority of the Administrator in managing the program. Often there were no more than a dozen Senators present, but Vandenberg stuck at his post throughout the four-hour session, and kept his temper most of the time.

Wherry Attempts Fail

He rejected an attempt by Senator Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.) to limit the authorization to one year in place of the 4½-year limit proposed in the bill.

He refused another suggestion by Wherry to put specific ceilings on the amounts of short-supply commodities that could be shipped to Europe under ERP.

He said still a third idea of Wherry's would be "the saddest sort of judgment"—a proposal to tell the European countries just how they could use the local currency funds which would be set aside as offsets to the value of American grants.

Finally, Vandenberg politely but firmly turned down a proposal by Senator Ball to remove the $5,300,000,000 figure from the authorization bill.

"I fully understand how it would speed up this debate and simplify matters," said Vandenberg, "but I think we should put the $5,300,000,000 in here and submit it to the review of the Appropriations Committee.

"I think the authorization is necessary to identify what this act contemplates."

Amendments Offered

Three amendments were offered in writing yesterday—the first two obviously aimed at Russia and her satellites. One, by Senator Knowland, would prohibit the export to any nonparticipating European country of any commodity which the administrator may find in insufficient supply to provide for the needs of the 16 participating countries.

The second, by Senator Brien MacMahon (D., Conn.), author of the Atomic Energy Act, would exact a pledge from the recipient countries not to export atomic materials except to the United States.

A third amendment, offered by Senators Milton Young (R., N. D.) and Harlan Bushfield (R., S. D.) would provide for a wheat carryover of at least 150 million bushels.

Other amendments will be offered today, perhaps in the light of last night's meeting of the 20 "revisionist" Republicans. So far, however, the debate has been tame for Vandenberg and other supporters of the program.

The Communist seizure of Czechoslovakia has brightened ERP's prospects in the Senate. The real storm clouds remain where they have always been—on the House side.

Italian Communists Snub Aid Conference

Rome, March 22 (U.P.).—The Communist leaders of the Labor Federation refused today to take part in a European labor conference on the Marshall Plan. They said the plan threatened to "raise the menace of a new world war."

New Protests Are Heard

have the experience necessary to make a good trial judge at the start. It isn't fair to the people of the District to require us to educate a judge at the expense of the taxpayers."

Bar Group Stand Given

Tamm's supporters, including Senator H. Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) and top Justice Department officials, have told the committee that Tamm's experience with legal matters in the FBI qualifies him for the job.

But Connaughton said "he'd have to be educated, it would take time to fit him for this kind of work. We object to paying taxes to educate a man to become a District judge."

John J. Carmody, native Washington attorney, presented the stand against Tamm taken earlier by the American Bar Association's special committee on the judiciary.

"This is an unpleasant task for me," said Carmody, "I know Tamm well and intimately. I regard him as a very fine high-type gentleman, but this issue transcends personalities."

Carmody said he felt there was no substitute for the hard knocks you get in the trial of a case. "It's inconceivable to me that a man could be a successful judge never having tried a case as a lawyer," he added.

Praised Personally

Francis W. Hill, jr., Godfrey L. Munter and Austin F. Canfield joined in the opposition. They and Carmody are all past presidents of the District Bar Association and members of its committee on judicial selections.

Canfield, like Carmody, praised Tamm.

"I know Tamm fairly intimately," he said, "I consider him one of the cleanest, most decent, most intelligent men I have ever met. I regret that I have to join in opposing him." Canfield agreed, however, that the job of justice in District Court requires some broad experience in practice of law.

Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.), member of the subcommittee headed by Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.) cross-examined several witnesses at length. At one point, Kilgore declared "I have a little different definition of a judge from some of my colleagues."

"I think the first requirement is a lot of good, common ordinary horse sense. Second, a judge should have a good analytical mind. Third, he should have a sense of decency and courtesy in dealing with lawyers and witnesses. Fourth, he should have a thorough foundation of the law and its application."

Electrician Faces Charge of Larceny From Builders

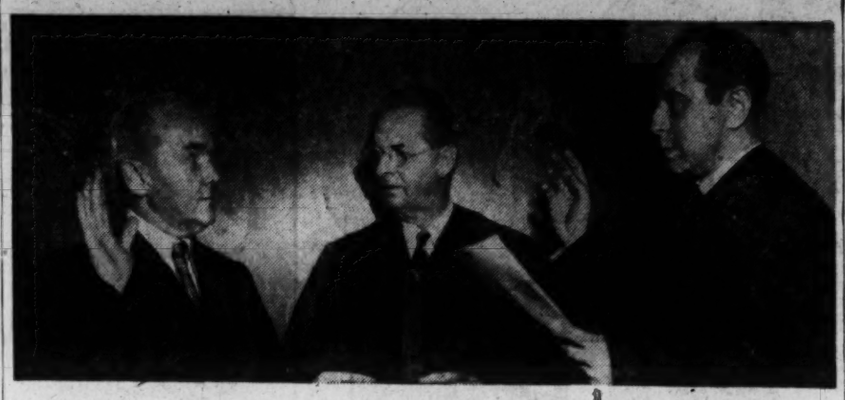
Clyde R. Henderson, 51-year-old Seat Pleasant (Md.) electrician, was held for grand jury action in Municipal Court yesterday on a charge that he took $500 from two builders, then failed to deliver promised materials.

Henderson surrendered to the United States Attorney's office Monday after a warrant charging larceny after trust had been sworn out by the building contractors, Henry J. Dreher, 1800 Connecticut ave. nw., and his partner, Frank Shomo of Vienna, Va.

Police said Henderson admitted taking a total of $2500 from the two men, but insisted he could deliver the plywood, white lead and saws if given time.

Henderson was out on $1000 bond bond yesterday after pleading innocent at his arraignment before Judge Ellen K. Raedy.

Myers Sworn in as Municipal Court Judge



The Washington Post

COURTROOM CEREMONY—Attorney Frank H. Myers (left) was sworn in yesterday as Municipal Court judge by Chief Judge Nathan Cayton (right) of the Municipal Court of Appeals. Chief Judge George P. Barse (center) of Municipal Court presided. More than 300 officials and friends witnessed the ceremony. Myers was commissioned by President Truman to fill the vacancy on the bench created by the death of Judge Nathan R. Margold

Municipal Court 'Trade' Continues to Grow

Municipal Court's booming business continued its upswing during the first half of the fiscal year July-December 1947, it was revealed yesterday.

Despite the increase, Chief Judge George P. Barse did not ask for additional judges in his semi-annual report to the Attorney General and the District Commissioners.

The volume of business increased 12.78 per cent or 7611 cases over the same period of the preceding fiscal year. Most of the increases were in civil actions "Class A" ($500 to $3000) and "Class B" cases ($50 to $500). Most of these involved jury trials.

As of the end of last year, a backlog of 935 civil jury cases remained to be calendared. In an intensified campaign to clear up the backlog, two judges from the Municipal Court of Appeals were enlisted.

Facility with which the backlog is taken care of under this program will determine the need for additional judges and personnel, Barse said.

There was a slight increase in demand for criminal jury trials totaling 98 cases over a similar period in the 1946 fiscal period, but disposition of cases showed that there were 300 more trials held in the July-December calendar.

From a financial standpoint, the court took in from fees, fines, forfeitures etc., $696,580. The court is operating on a budget of $475,900 but on the basis of expected increase in revenue will be earning $1,393,161.93 or three times the amount it costs to operate the court.

Tuck Election Bill Changes Possible

Richmond, Va., March 2.—Efforts of Gov. William M. Tuck to change State election laws in Virginia went underground today as his controversial bill went under Assembly committee scrutiny.

With no further action by Tuck, usually reliable sources predicted his administration forces were preparing amendments which would enable Truman to be on the ballot if he were nominated by the national party.

These amendments, it was said, would provide two sets of Democratic electors in November—one to vote for the nominee of the national party and one to vote as directed by the convention of the State Democratic Party.

Meanwhile, Virginia Republicans added to the general confusion by tossing into the hopper an amendment which would bar the name of President Truman from the November presidential ballot.

The effect of this amendment would be to leave the GOP ballot "as is" before the Tuck plan was brought in.

Bethesdans Strongly Oppose 97-Acre, 970-Unit Project

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

A proposed 13-million-dollar, 970-unit apartment project at River and Goldsboro rds., near Bethesda, Md., was bitterly attacked yesterday by about 50 residents of the area.

Backer of the proposed garden-type development is Gustav Ring, builder of the Colonial Village and Arlington Village apartment developments in Arlington.

According to Attorney R. Duncan Clarke, who represented Colonial Village, Inc., in the already once-denied plea for rezoning, the project backers plan 10-apartment units per acre on the 97 acre tract.

There would be ample park and recreation areas, he said, and if county authorities would agree the firm would build a 12-room elementary school on the tract on a cost-plus, fixed-fee basis with the county reimbursing the builders in 15 to 20 years.

It also is planned, Clarke said, to surround the apartment development with single-family residences costing between $20,000 and $25,000 to serve as a buffer to adjoining homes.

Principal opponent at yesterday's public hearing on the rezoning petition held by the county commissioners was Donald L. Chamberlin of the Kennedy-Chamberlin Development Co.

Chamberlin, whose firm developed Kenwood which adjoins the Colonial Village, Inc., tract, said in his opinion it would be "criminal negligence" to grant the rezoning. "If you do rezone it, I have a 68-acre tract on River rd. which I will ask be rezoned," he told the commissioners.

All of the speakers, including Naval Capt. E. A. Junghans, speaking for the Englist Village-Bradley Woods Citizens Association, and Joseph H. Sheehy, of Woodacres, said they "concurred heartily" with a written opinion of the park and planning commission recommending disapproval of the petition.

Lone speaker on behalf of the petition was Samuel E. Bogley, Bethesda realtor, who argued that the housing shortage, if nothing else, would justify approval of the apartment plan.

The commissioners took the application under advisement.

Dr. Bowman, Johns Hopkins Head, to Retire

Baltimore, March 2 (AP).—Dr. Isaiah Bowman, president of Johns Hopkins University, asked for retirement today and quoted a scientist's dictum:

"The man who has survived the toil and tension of high responsibility up to the age of 70 is a biological miracle."

The noted geographer will be 70 next December 26. He suggested to the university board of trustees that a successor might take over as early as June 30. He offered to remain until his birthday.

Dr. Bowman became president of Johns Hopkins in 1935. He was chief territorial adviser to President Wilson at the Peace Conference following World War I. During World War II he was a member of the State Department's policy committee, chairman of the department's territorial committee, and a special adviser to the Secretary of State.

He served on the American delegations at the Dumbarton Oaks Conference which devised preliminary plans for the United Nations and the San Francisco Conference which drew up the U. N. Charter.

Dr. Bowman is a native of Waterloo, Ontario. He received his B. S. at Harvard in 1905 and his Ph. D. at Yale in 1909. Thirteen schools in the United States and South America have given him honorary degrees.

One of his big projects outside Johns Hopkins was a study of Maryland's State government in 1938.

The purpose of the survey was "to study the structure of the State government with a view of effecting economy and to increase efficiency." About three-fourths of the recommendations were adopted by the General Assembly.

Former Girl Friend Of Mussolini Sought

By the United Press

Representative John McDowell (R., Pa.) said yesterday the House Un-American Activities Committee has launched an "active search" for a former mistress of Benito Mussolini.

The woman, whose name has not been revealed, was last reported living on the West Coast. But McDowell said she disappeared before the committee could question her about her entry into the United States.

"It may be she's now in Mexico," he added. "In any case, we are making an active search for her."

Magliano is know in fight circles as Benny Trotta. The others convicted were John V. Cataneo, president of the American Ship Cleaning Co., and Vincent Drecchio, war-time foreman and timekeeper for the firm.

An all-male jury deliberated three hours and 12 minutes before returning its verdict. The jurors recommended leniency for Drecchio.

Judge William C. Coleman sentenced Magliano to two years and two days in a Federal prison. Cataneo was given a two-year term and Drecchio 18 months.

9-Man Committee Report Given to Greenbelt Council

Findings of a special nine-man committee, appointed to investigate the Greenbelt, Md., town administration five months ago, will be made public within the next few weeks, town officials said yesterday.

Its report was handed to the five members of the town council Monday night, but was not discussed by the councilmen, who comprise the majority membership of the investigating committee. The council plans a further study of the report before making it public.

The committee functioned purely as a fact-finding body, and its report will contain only an analysis of evidence collected in the investigation, town officials said. It will make no recommendations for disposition of the charges filed against both Police Chief George Panagoulis and Town Manager James T. Gobbel, accused of dereliction of duty and maladministration.

Final action on the charges will rest with the town council.

House Starts Viers Mills Village Probe

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A congressional committee yesterday initiated an investigation into the sharply-criticized Viers Mills Village veterans' housing project.

The probe, sparked off by Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.) was undertaken by the House Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

Representative Clare E. Hoffman (R., Mich.), committee chairman, assigned a special investigator yesterday to dig into the housing development, under construction on Viers Mill rd., between Wheaton and Rockville, in Montgomery County.

Representative Beall kicked off the probe yesterday by introducing a House resolution to create a select committee of five to look into the 1400-home project. Some 200 homes already have been built there.

The committee would determine whether any "mistakes" had been made in financing and construction. The inquiry would also determine the parts played by the builder or contractor, Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration.

The resolution was referred to the House Rule Committee. Representative Beall, pressing for action, immediately conferred with Rules Chairman Leo E. Allen (R., Ill.), who pointed out the speediest move was available through the Hoffman Committee.

Representative Beall quickly sought out Representative Hoffman and the latter agreed to start the investigation at once.

Montgomery County officials charge the Viers Mill Village four-room dwellings are being sold to veterans for $8700, but are worth no more than $5600. At that, the housing is "substandard," according to charges of Montgomery County Commissioner Brooke Johns. The charges have been denied by the Haris Construction Co. of New York, project builders.

Sheriffs Aide Ducks And Bullet Misses

Vallejo, Calif., March 2 (AP).—Sheriff's Capt. Guy Headlee bent down to adjust something in his radio booth early today—and saved his life.

At that moment, a bullet tore through the plate glass window of the booth. Measurement later showed it would have struck Headlee squarely in the head if he hadn't ducked.

The gunman escaped unidentified.

19 Die in Air Crash

Belem, Brazil, March 1 (U.P.).—The army air base here reported today that a Brazilian air force transport missing since Saturday had crashed on an island in the mouth of the Amazon River, apparently killing 19 persons.

Destroyer Duncan Makes Port Alone After Explosion

Long Beach, Calif., March 2 (AP). The crippled destroyer Duncan lay in port today, a jagged rent in its side showing the force of an explosion, which killed one seaman and injured 14.

The Eleventh Naval District identified the dead sailor as Claude D. Green, jr., shipfitter third class, of San Antonio, Texas.

The explosion occurred yesterday 200 miles at sea, but the 390-foot Navy fighting ship reached port under her own power. The rip, at the water line on the starboard side aft was more than 30 feet long. The blast also buckled the ship's deck plates.

Fairfax Countian Held In 2 Highway Deaths

A 34-year-old Fairfax County farm worker faces trial in Fairfax Trial Justice Court today on two manslaughter charges resulting from the death of two pedestrians in a hit-run accident last Friday night.

The second manslaughter charge was lodged by county police yesterday against Cecil I. Davy, of Clifton, following the death of Clate H. Baldwin, 48, Route 1, Fairfax, at Arlington Hospital late Monday. He had been held earlier in the death of J. C. Bare, who, according to police, died a few hours after he and Mr. Baldwin were struck by Davy's auto on Route 211 near Fairfax.

Davy is being held without bond on both charges.

Marshall Urges UMT Passage Before Senate Services Group

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Secretary of State George C. Marshall yesterday told the Senate Armed Services Committee that Congress should approve universal military training.

Chairman Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.) and five other members of the group went to see Marshall to find out what military measures should be taken in light of the Communist seizure of power in Czechoslovakia and Soviet pressure on Finland.

Earlier the group postponed a decision on whether or not to consider UMT this year due to lack of a quorum at a scheduled committee meeting. Instead they decided to seek first hand information on the international situation.

"In view of all the things that have happened lately in the international field, including Czechoslovakia and the critical situation in Finland, our committee decided we wanted to talk to Marshall," Gurney told reporters after an hour and a quarter conference with the Secretary of State.

"We asked for his viewpoint of UMT and heard him reaffirm vehemently his belief that the training program should be approved at this time."

2 Factors Govern Senate Unit

UMT has been approved by the House Armed Services Committee but seems pigeon-holed in the House Rules Committee. The Senate group has been postponing a decision on whether to consider the bill this session on two grounds. They have been awaiting House action and some firm cost estimates from the Pentagon.

The latter were received last weekend and Gurney planned to present them to the group yesterday and ask a decision. He said last night that the matter would be considered by the committee early next week.

Senators who attended the meeting with Marshall included Bridges (R., N. H.), Robertson (R., Wyo.), Saltonstall (R., Mass.), Byrd (D., Va.) and Hill (D., Ala.).

Knowland Supports UMT

Meanwhile, Senator Knowland (R., Calif.) urged that Congress approve UMT and build up the Nation's air forces to combat communism. He declared the Marshall Plan does not go far enough in this way.

On the other hand, Senator Thye (R., Minn.) termed the training program "an undesirable departure from American traditions." He advocated expansion of funds for other preparedness measures and declared he might "regretfully" vote for UMT if world conditions become worse.

Both Senator Taft (R., Ohio) and Chairman Allen (R., Ill.) of the House Rules Committee cited the Joint Congressional Air Policy Board's report as supporting their stand against UMT. Taft said he favored "an extra billion or so for air preparedness."

Martial Law Is Threatened In Costa Rica

San Jose, Costa Rica, March 2 (AP).—President Teodoro Picado today threatened martial law if the Union Nacional Party tries to back its presidential candidate with a general strike.

He ordered all banks closed today and tomorrow to halt heavy withdrawals which resulted from the political tension.

Two were dead and one seriously wounded in gunplay which broke out after the administration majority in Congress annulled the victory of Newspaper Publisher Otilio Ulate Blanco in the February 8 presidential election. The new Congress has not yet taken office.

National police headquarters reported the arrest of four men at Cartago, northwest of here, in an automobile loaded with dynamite and percussion caps.

The electric generating plant which supplies power to the Pacific Railroad was dynamited today. An aqueduct which supplies the town of Tres Rios with water also was dynamited.

Police indicated Ulate fled from the home of Carlos Valverde, a supporter, last night about five minutes before the shooting began. Two customs guards were killed and Valverde, a newly elected deputy, was critically wounded.

Ulate had been using the Valverde home as a headquarters since the election. Police said they found weapons and ammunition there. They arrested Carlos Ulate, the publisher's cousin, and Jorge Arguedas Truque, a writer for his newspaper.

The newspaper, Diario de Costa Rica, failed to publish today. The city was quiet, with few people in the streets. Nearly all business houses were closed here today.

(In Guatemala, Pan-American Airways suspended its flights to San Jose.)

Uruguay and Britain Make Railroad Deal

Montevideo, Uruguay, March 2 (U.P.).—An agreement was signed today whereby the Uruguayan government buys all British-owned railroads in this country for 7,150,000 pounds sterling—approximately $28,600,000.

The agreement must be ratified by Parliament in both countries but ratification was taken for granted and plans were made for Uruguay to take over operation of the railroads on July 1.

Farley Says He Felt Like Slapping Wallace Down in 1940

By D. Harold Oliver
Associated Press Reporter

James A. Farley reported yesterday he felt like slapping Henry Wallace down in 1940 when Wallace insisted Farley's "party obligations ranked highest."

Farley

Farley writes of the incident in his book, "Jim Farley's Story — the Roosevelt Years," published today by Whittlesey House.

He also reports that he and Cordell Hull agreed that the late President Roosevelt "was a sick man at Yalta and should not have been called upon to make decisions affecting this country and the world."

The Wallace episode occurred at a meeting in August, 1940, to pick a new Democratic national chairman. Farley had resigned from the Cabinet and the chairmanship in protest over the third term. Wallace was then Democratic vice presidential nominee.

(He had bolted the Republican Party to become Roosevelt's Secretary of Agriculture. Now he has bolted the Democrats to head a third party ticket for President.)

Roosevelt and Wallace were trying to persuade Farley to stay on as chairman or take an active part in the campaign.

"I told them everyone assembled must understand well that I occupied a position of my own, in my own right, before the country," Farley writes, "and I certainly had a right to protect that position.

"Wallace took exception to the last statement, insisting my party obligations ranked highest. I might have slapped him down as a Johnny-Come-Lately who had no right to preach to me, but that would have been mean and petty."

Farley told the group he was no "Fifth Columnist" and that the fact he was willing to keep the New York State chairmanship should show his "regard and affection" for the party.

Mr. Roosevelt had already tried to get him to stay on. Farley refused, saying ". . . I feel that the President has lost confidence in me, and to be very frank, I have lost confidence in him."

Farley chronicles the Roosevelt story from the time in November, 1930—when he and the late Louis Howe tossed Roosevelt's hat into the presidential ring after the latter's reelection as Governor of New York—down through the years to his third-term break and the postwar period. Many of the highlights were told several months ago in magazine articles.

Relating his conversation with Hull about Roosevelt's health two days after the President's death, Farley says:

"Physical illness, we knew, taxed the mind and left him in no shape to bargain with such bargainers as the Russians and such astute diplomats as the British."

Telling of his world travels since Roosevelt's death in April, 1945, Farley says:

"Without exception the leading men of all nations expressed admiration for the courage of Franklin D. Roosevelt. . . .

"Yet, on every side, I heard expressions of regret that he was not himself in the most critical days of world history."

Again referring to the third and fourth terms, Farley says:

"Perhaps no President since Jackson did more for the common people or showed greater administrative courage.

"Roosevelt made mistakes. So have we all. Perhaps his greatest mistake was in remaining too long in office. He won himself a place in history in this first two terms. That position would have been enhanced had he withdrawn to the role of elder statesman in 1941, lending his aid to his successor."

In further discussion of the third term Farley says:

"I say that without rancor because I believe what has happened to me has happened for the best. I am now providing for my family, which I could not have done if I had remained in public life."

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN
Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes show there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

FLY SOUTH for SUNSHINE and HEALTH

New-Type CONSTELLATIONS have added 350,000,000 passenger miles to the great dependability record of

EASTERN Air Lines

Dick Merrill, famous Eastern Air Lines Captain, says: "I've served with Eastern's Pilot Organization for twenty years. In that time The Great Silver Fleet has built up a record for dependability second to none."
"The New-Type Constellation has helped us maintain that record to the tune of 350,000,000 passenger miles. It BELONGS to The Great Silver Fleet."
Captain Merrill is just one of hundreds of "Tried and Proven" Eastern Air Lines pilots who are upholding Eastern's tradition for dependability in air transportation.

Eastern's Great Silver Fleet of DC-4's and DC-3's have established a remarkable record for dependability.

Over nine months ago we augmented our fleet with New-Type Constellations, the World's most powerful and modern Airliners. In that short time these large luxury liners have flown over 350,000,000 passenger miles.

They have set a new standard in the industry for speed, for smoothness of flight, and for dependability.

New-Type Constellations have proved all we expected of them and more. But just as remarkable has been the record of our famous DC-4's and DC-3's. They have kept abreast of The New-Type Constellations in giving our passengers the one thing they want most...dependability. Dependability, above everything else, is the goal and achievement of The Great Silver Fleet.

Cost Of Disunity

In projecting necessary air strength the Congressional Aviation Policy Board was forced to take separate figures of the Air Force and Navy and attempt to weld them into a workable program. It recommends alternative plans, one calling for a combined total of 35,041 aircraft for mounting a prompt air offensive, and the other calling for a lesser number to withstand an initial attack and provide what would be in essence a holding operation. The total defense cost under the first plan would rise to 18.72 billion dollars annually by 1953; under the second, to 15.42 billions. In this connection the board touches on what we regard as a major defect in the present system of determining the military budget: ". . . amounts arbitrarily allocated by the Bureau of the Budget" which "do not even approximate the stated requirements of the services."

If increasing military expenditures are to be accepted as necessary for survival in the air age, and if (as is the case) the existing expenditures are a grievous burden on the taxpayer, then there is particular relevance in the board's estimate of "material savings" through a unified plan. Indeed, the report specifically advocates that the military establishment submit a revised budget by June 30 based on the achievement of a unified plan, and, moreover, that there be an annual determination of budget needs in over-all rather than piecemeal terms. Among many other excellent observations on civil aviation and Government organization, the Congressional Aviation Policy Board merits especial praise for the penetrating and nonpolitical fashion in which it has pointed up the cost of disunity.

Presidential Election

Apart from Virginia's threat to throw a monkey wrench into our electoral machinery, there seems to be much interest in the proposal to give the people a direct vote for President and Vice President. Representative Clarence F. Lea directs our attention to the resolution for this purpose which he has had before Congress for many years. That measure was once favorably reported to the House but was blocked by the Rules Committee. Several other members, both Democrats and Republicans, have similar resolutions pending before a House Judiciary Subcommittee. Representative Estes Kefauver thinks the issue so important that he has introduced it into his campaign for the Democratic senatorial nomination in Tennessee.

To our way of thinking, the most important reason for approving this proposed amendment to the Constitution is that it would eliminate the existing perilous uncertainty in the election of the President. In addition to defeating the will of the people, bosses in the States can plunge our electoral machinery into confusion. Intervention by Congress to mitigate the effects of such confusion resulted in the choice of minority candidates in both 1824 and 1876. It is inexcusably shortsighted for a great nation such as the United States to rely upon a cumbersome, uncertain and easily disrupted system for the election of its Chief Executive.

Other unfortunate consequences of the present outmoded method of electing the President are properly emphasized by both Mr. Lea and Mr. Kefauver. "The truth is," said Representative Kefauver, "that presidential candidates throughout the years have made whipping boys of those sections which are considered to be definitely in the camp of their party." The Republicans seldom have to concern themselves about what Maine, Vermont, Michigan and Wisconsin think. The Democrats invariably take the South for granted, as President Truman did in his civil rights message. These States have little more voice in the selection of the President than if they were outside the Union. The presidential contest invariably centers in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, California and a few other States. By the same token those States tend to be favored in the location of Federal projects and the distribution of patronage. The Solid South in particular cannot hope to have one of its citizens chosen President or to have its demands taken seriously by either party under the present electoral system.

This would be changed overnight with the direct election of the President. Each State would retain the same number of electoral votes it now has. But those votes would be divided among the candidates in the same proportions as the popular votes are divided. We should then have a contest throughout the United States. Republicans could win counting votes in Alabama and Georgia; Democrats in Maine and Vermont. Incidentally, third parties would no longer be able to swing the election one way or the other by capturing a few votes in pivotal States, as they do under the block system of counting electoral votes. The proposed amendment has so much to commend it that we hope its sponsors will push it through Congress while the people are in a mood to appreciate its significance.

Soviet Aims

The gloom that has arisen in the Capital has grown as black as night since the Soviet seizure of the Czech government. Memories have been stirred of the Czech origins of the last war. Many observers, partly for this reason, are thinking in terms of 1938. Is this, they ask, the precursor of the third world war? Was the Soviet coup a war move? A good many answers are in the affirmative. The events in Prague, however, leave our own conviction unshaken that the Soviet is not intent upon war with America. Of course, there is such a thing, as Lloyd George put it, as "stumbling into war," and any one of the satellite leaders, by taking a chance or losing control of their followers, could ignite a general conflagration. But this is a different matter from a war policy wittingly pursued by the Kremlin.

Assumptions, in the absence of precise knowledge, are the foundation of policy. The problem for statesmanship is to make and act upon wise assumptions. Let us explain why we are not convinced that the Soviet intends to make war on the United States:

1. The Slav is different from the Teuton in that he does not believe in direct action. Hitler, it is now a matter of record, wanted war. That is to say, he was determined to bull his way to his objective viz, world domination, regardless of consequences. Stalin, in our opinion, is intent upon precisely the same objective, but his tactics are different. He wants the fruits of a war of conquest, but would shrink and back away from a collision with the United States. The proper analogy for Soviet aggression is the ameba. The ameba flows on and on, and is stopped only when it encounters something indigestible, and then flows around it.

2. The Soviet Union, which suffered unbelievable carnage and destruction in the last war, is too weak to sustain war with the United States. Whether the Russians have got the atomic bomb or not, it is impossible to believe that their organization is capable of mounting an atomic attack, for, though they are rich in scientific brains, they are poor in technological achievement. Their airplanes, even their jets, are similarly handicapped in range. As for their manpower, this is unequaled in defense, but hasn't the same zeal when fighting abroad, and lacks the power that comes from freedom of choice. In order to work up a fighting spirit in Finland in 1939-40, for instance, the Russians were told that they were fighting on their own soil against the invader.

3. The whole of the Kremlin dogma is based on the potential rottenness of the United States as an alleged capitalist-imperialist power. Why should the Russians wage war when they know with religious conviction that the United States is bound sooner or later to disintegrate and collapse? It doesn't make sense. If they refuse to cooperate, if they push and obstruct everywhere, they feel that they will fall heir to the West. Time, they firmly believe, is on their side, and they don't intend to cripple this alliance by going to war.

4. At present the Soviet Union, as is demonstrated by Stalin's pep talks to the workers on American productivity, has a healthy respect for American strength. And only a group of monomaniacs would risk a war with such an adversary. The two world wars happened as the result of terrible miscalculations, either as to the other side's power or its allies. Specifically, America lay outside Germany's initial calculations in both wars.

For these reasons taken together our own assumption is that the Soviet Union is not war-bent. If this is the correct assumption (and hitherto it has been both Secretary Marshall's and General Eisenhower's), then a premium is put on boldness and resolution in American policy. To be strong and united at home is essential but nowadays not enough. Moscow must not be left in two minds about American intentions. Since the coup in Prague the tier of states along the eastern rim of the Atlantic must be brought into a defense union with the United States. No aid will come from Europe, which is beleaguered as much by its own panic as by the nearing menace, and no hindrance will be encountered in the path of the Slavic aggressor without such a union.

Too Little Again

One would think that by now even the most introspective Congressman would have realized the tremendous importance of an adequate foreign information program. Certainly that was the implication to be drawn from passage of the Smith-Mundt bill to make the program a permanent operation. Yet the House Appropriations Committee apparently still has its head in the sand. It proposes to lop more than six million dollars off the $34,378,000 asked by the State Department for radio broadcasts and other information activities during fiscal 1949. The committee could scarcely have chosen a worse time for venting its economy penchant. With Russian terror and intimidation creeping westward, with Italy and even France in the balance, and with our supreme effort at stabilization in the Marshall Plan about to be launched, the committee puts a severe crimp in the funds necessary to get our story across.

The 34 million dollars asked for this purpose is only a little more than ½ of 1 per cent of the 5.3 billion dollars we expect to spend during the first year of the European Recovery Program. One half of 1 per cent to explain this grandiose effort to the people of Europe! How are they to understand the goals of ERP unless we tell them? Are they to rely on Moscow's version? A recent poll indicated that no less than 35 per cent of the French people believe either that ERP has been contrived to dispose of American surpluses or is a scheme to dominate Europe. This is the sort of attitude that must be combated. As the Smith-Mundt committee report observes, if we were to disregard the Kremlin's attempt to poison the mind of Europe, "our generosity would be surpassed only by our own ineptitude. Compared to the expense of supplying the physical needs of Europe, the expense of providing truth is but trifling." Yet, according to Senator Smith, Russia currently allots 10 to 15 times as much as we do for propaganda. Even tiny Holland spends nearly 25 times more to promote understanding in this country than we do to tell our story there.

Maritime Policy

Joseph Curran's recent testimony before Congress on shipping aspects of the European Recovery Program merits examination. As chairman of the CIO Maritime Committee, Mr. Curran objects to the proposed transfer of 300 surplus American vessels to European registry—a proposal on which Secretary Marshall subsequently pleaded with the House to take action. Mr. Curran's objection is conditioned by the fear that such a move will contribute to "a serious overtonnage of the world's dry cargo vessels in excess of 5000 deadweight tons" and hence would have a detrimental effect both on American shipping operations and the jobs of American seamen. To bolster his point he cites the feverish shipbuilding activity abroad while American concerns are laying up ships and the number of American workers employed in new ship construction is down to around 30,000.

The ship transfers recommended in the Marshall Plan were of course predicated on an equivalent reduction in European shipbuilding. The saving to be accomplished was figured less in dollars than in scarce steel needed for other purposes both here and abroad. To be sure, the principal remaining shortage is in the small vessels that once were the nucleus of the amazing system of European intracoastal and river commerce. The thought was that European nations could use Liberty ships temporarily for some of this trade, even though they are not precisely suited to it and their use over the long run would be uneconomical. If, in fact, surplus American vessels cannot be employed for this purpose, or if European nations refuse to forgo building additional ships if the transfer is made, then obviously the proposal must be reconsidered. On the other hand, Mr. Curran's objection about future overtonnage could be met, it seems to us, by a requirement that the transferred ships be returned to American disposition when the emergency is over.

Beyond this immediate problem, what Mr. Curran is really striking at is the lack of a coordinated American maritime policy in light of the postwar shipping situation. In this he is on solid ground, for there has been little implementation of the Keller report on the merchant marine, a report which recommended, among other things, the construction of 10 new passenger vessels, including a 50,000-ton express liner in fiscal 1949 in addition to seven merchant vessels this year. Although there is an immense pool of Liberty ships on which to draw, it is a lamentable fact that new American construction has withered away to virtually nothing while European nations are building millions of tons of faster, more modern vessels.

It is not necessary to accept the premise that active American shipping should be kept at its wartime level to the exclusion of other nations or that every marginal American seaman be guaranteed a job. At the outset, however, any maritime policy must recognize that if American shipping is to compete with foreign nations, in light of wage differentials and lower costs elsewhere, then such competition will depend on better, faster service in addition to subsidies. What is necessary is a determination of how much competition is desirable for American security. Then the Government will have to take a hand in providing means for retiring older noncompetitive vessels and in furnishing the financial aid necessary for experimentation and new shipbuilding sufficient for the needs of both commerce and security. In other words, it will have to do for maritime resources what the Air Policy Commission has recommended with respect to aviation.

THE TRACK

O God,
Who keeps us trammeled,
Tramping in the bitter rote
Out tie-marked years within this gauge of dust?

Junctioned
By birth and death
And railed with strife—whose hand
Our unseen timetable designs
For life?

So much
There is to feel
Beyond the cinder track
Of spikes and arbitrary grades
And steel:

The hills
On either side
Rise up, green mysteries,
And all the valleys of the heart
Invite;

For there
In the calm meadow
Never scissored by the speed
Of clicking wheels, we will not hear
The faintest echo of
Our whistle stop
For sleep.

"Unfinished Business"

"We doubt that John Taber of Appropriations or Harold Knutson of Ways and Means, or Clare Hoffman of Expenditures, would have a look-in if committee chairmanships were distributed on the basis of merit and for the purpose of giving effect to the policies favored by the majority members of the House as a group," says The Washington Post in its editorial, "Unfinished Business," of February 23.

Aren't you really suggesting two unrelated bases for the assignment of committee chairmanships here? Or is "merit" and "the purpose of giving effect to the policies favored by the majority" really the same thing?

To advocate the distribution of responsibility or anything else for that matter, "on the basis of merit" reminds me of that old Communist shibboleth, "From each according to ability, to each according to need." They both "sound good," they both "sound reasonable"—unless it occurs to us that all these bases of determination are relative within the time, place, circumstances and purpose governing their application, and that, if they are applied, someone—usually someone else, not us—will insist upon his superior qualifications arbitrarily to determine the degree and method of their application.

Assignment of committee chairmanships "according to seniority" is one method of filling these responsible positions.

Assignment of committee chairmanships "on the basis of merit" is another method of filling them.

I have disagreed very frequently with Messrs. Taber, Knutson and Hoffman, but I never have felt that my disagreement qualified me to say that "merit" and "seniority" are necessarily different qualifications.

Perhaps you will tell us something about how you developed your ability to distinguish between them. DOUBTING THOMAS.

"Sidetracked UMT"

I was amused—rather sardonically—to read your February 18 editorial, "Sidetracked UMT."

Your editorial indicates shock and consternation over an "abuse of the committee power" through the refusal of House Rules Committee Chairman Lee Allen to permit the House to vote on UMT.

Why not be honest? The editors of The Washington Post are fully aware that Chairman Allen would be helpless to prevent a vote on UMT unless he was backed 100 per cent in his opposition by the Republican leadership of the House.

Why not be consistent? The editors were fully aware all through 1947 that Allen and other GOP leaders had entered into a similar conspiracy to keep from the floor of the House pending and important veterans' legislation which had been approved in committee—just as UMT was approved.

In all that time The Washington Post never raised its voice in opposition to the admitted conspiracy or to express its shock or consternation over such "abuse of the committee power."

I am not opposed to UMT, but I am opposed to an editorial policy which shuts its eyes to abuse, conspiracy and injustice directed against the veterans and screams loudly when this same type of abuse, conspiracy or injustice directly touches upon that policy.

Government Leave

Mr. J. Shedd, in his letter of February 28, believes that Federal employes are getting away with an unwarranted amount of annual vacation leave and sick leave.

The Government clerk gets 26 days a year annual leave, but if he wants a day off he must take annual leave. He does not get "free time" as he would if he were working in a business office.

And if an employe in a business office is taken sick, he is not confined to 15 days of sick leave with pay. If he is employed by a first class firm, they pay him for all the time he is out sick—it is not charged to his vacation leave.

Does Mr. Shedd, in figuring out just how many days a Government employe works a year, know that before the war the Government clerk worked 39 hours a week and today he works 40 hours a week? In other words, he works 52 hours, or 6½ days, more a year than he did before the war.

Czech Communists

The performance of the Communists in Czechoslovakia should be another warning and lesson to those of our own citizens who still think that we should be more tolerant of the Communists and should stop "persecuting" them for their "political opinions."

The Communist "Party" is not an ordinary political party. It is a criminal conspiracy, international in scope, against human liberties. Communists are traitors and criminals—traitors because they are serving a foreign dictatorship, and criminals because of the deceitful and violent methods by which they seek to achieve their purposes.

Democratic Split

The antics of Governor Tuck and the other Southern Governors who are staging a political rebellion against the Democratic Party may or may not be important per se. What cannot so easily be brushed aside is the rift that threatens to split open the party of the Administration.

The late President Roosevelt really fathered the civil rights program that—in Truman's hands—seems to have become a red herring, but this caused little damage in the Solid South while Roosevelt was at the helm. Whatever his faults, the late President was a first-class politician who knew how far he could go on a certain issue. What was even more important was that he first laid down a policy—usually broad and humanitarian—and then moved heaven and hell to accomplish it.

That technique, which was so successful in getting things done, is not among Truman's gifts. The Nation is now in the dangerous position of having a leader in the White House who prefers to be led, who lacks a broad program and who relies on a small group that itself is barren of progressive, modern ideas. Unfortunately, this man is the nominal head of the Democratic Party and unless something is quickly done he will be the party's nominee for President in November's election.

I submit that it is time for the Democrats to look about for another standard-bearer. Truman was never the choice of the Nation; he is President by an unfortunate accident. If he continues to act as he has in the past two years, the Democrats will be defeated in the next election even though the Nation is not yet back to the Republican groove of the 1920s. T. A. HAMILTON.

Nazi Agents Among The Arabs

It is, indeed, strange how little attention and thought are given to the fact that the Arab political and military leaders, who are engaged at present in an effort to defeat the U. N. decision on Palestine, are, almost without exception, notorious for their Axis affiliation previous to and during the war.

Much has already been said and written about the notorious former Mufti. Less, however, is known about some of his closest collaborators, who are launching the present campaign against the authority of the United Nations and the Jewish community in Palestine.

Gen. Taha al-Hashami, for instance—who has been named commander in chief of the army of recruits from the Arab states—was Defense Minister in Iraq from December, 1938, till February, 1941, when he was appointed Prime Minister. He held this post until April, 1941, when he was succeeded by Rashid Ali al-Gailani. Taha Pasha was cofounder of the pro-Nazi club, Al-Muthanna, in Baghdad in 1935. He was also a close friend of the former Mufti and cofounder and president of the Iraqi Society for the Defense of Palestine. The same society prepared Arabic broadcasts for the Berlin radio.

This work brought Taha Pasha in close touch with the German Embassy and with the Nazi agent, Dr. Amin Ruwaiha, who, together with Jamal Husseini, was interned during the war by the British in Rhodesia and is now active for the former Mufti in Syria. Taha Pasha also fostered relations with a group of pro-Fascist army officers, who formed a clique called "the Golden Square." ["The Golden Square" was chiefly responsible for the pro-Nazi Rashid Ali revolt, for which Taha al-Hashimi, as Defense Minister and Premier, paved the way.) It was Taha Pasha who exerted all his influence to prevent Iraq from breaking off with Germany after the war started. He placed active pro-Nazis in key positions.

Of Fawzi al-Kawukji, commanding general of the Arab attackers, Dana Adams Schmidt, in a dispatch from Damascus to the New York Times (January 19, 1948,) wrote: "But he looks less like an Arab than a German . . . We talked German, which is the language he prefers. He became fluent, when, in the Turkish army during World War I, he made friends with German officers attached to it."

During the Rashdi Ali rebellion, Kawukji, according to a British intelligence report of December 1, 1941, "was the militant member (of the former Mufti's headquarters) and contacted the Iraqi army, raising from this source arms and ammunition and the facilities to train men for guerilla warfare." (The Arab war effort.) He commanded a desert unit, and when the revolt was suppressed, retreatd with his men to Deir ez-Zor and thence to Palmyra in the Syrian desert. On his way to Palmyra he was attacked by British planes (July, 1941) and severely wounded by machine gun fire. He was moved to Aleppo and from there flown in a German plane to Berlin. After half a year of medical treatment in Berlin, Kawukji was able, throughout the war, to fulfill the task he undertook, namely, the recruiting of Moslems to serve with the Nazi armies.

When the air raids in Berlin grew very heavy, Kawukji moved to Dresden, where, at Hitler's collapse, he fell into the hands of the Red army. Interned by the Soviet authorities early in 1947, he escaped to Berlin and was enabled to reach Paris in February, 1947. The French did not interfere with his freedom and he took a plane to Cairo. Although Kawukji's plane landed and stayed for half an hour at Lydda airport in Palestine, the British police did not arrest him. He continued on to Cairo and thence to his native Lebanon. Since his return to the Levant, Kawukji has been organizing forces for the fight in Palestine.

Third for prominence in the news is Hassan Salameh, in charge of operations in the Jaffa area. Salameh, who has a somewhat unsavory record for the years leading up to the war in 1939, fled to Syria and Iraq, where he joined the entourage of the former Mufti. In 1942 he appeared in Turkey and later joined the Arab-Nazi battalions formed in Germany. Salameh was an officer in the German commando forces and made a name for himself in Yugoslavia. Holding the rank of a German major, he was parachuted in October, 1944, near Jericho, to conduct fifth column activities and sabotage. His three fellow parachutists were caught, but Salameh escaped.

In 1946 Salameh worked closely with the former Mufti's agents in Syria to organize lawless elements for action in Palestine. In December, 1947, Salameh came to Palestine on an assignment for the former Mufti—reportedly he had with him one of the German officers with whom he parachuted in 1944.

These are but a few of the Arab Nazi collaborators who are regrouping again for the fight. The Middle East is alive with them. For the Arab agents of the Nazis do not constitute a DP problem; they have all—from Europe, Turkey and elsewhere—been repatriated to the Arab states.

Feminine Front Strategy

By Malvina Lindsay

Key To Tomorrow

"ONE OF the biggest mistakes in strategy western democratic forces made after the second World War was in underestimating the potential power of women."

Such a statement, students of a few decades hence may read in history books. The stage for it is being set throughout the world.

In Romania where the "Red Czarina," Ana Pauker, holds sway as Foreign Minister, plans have been announced for consolidating all women's organizations into the Union of Romanian Women. This one-club system is typical of the way Communist forces are organizing and indoctrinating women in eastern Europe, including the Soviet zone of Germany.

It is not the method western democracies could or would use. But so far they have had no dynamic plan to counter it. They are making little attempt to encourage women of occupied and liberated countries toward political self expression. Yet women hold the predominant power in numbers throughout most of the world.

One reason for this democratic dozing at the wheel is the lingering influence of the Bourbon mind. Another is the fact that occupying forces are wholly man-run. Still another is that American and British women have not interested themselves greatly in the problem.

IN JAPAN and Germany women are at a crisis. Japanese women, after getting the vote, showed a splurge of political activity. But the status quo set there, as in Europe, is determined they shall not get too far out of hand. Hence there is danger they will turn more and more to leftist groups for recognition.

Nowhere do women have greater promise than in Japan. No place are they more eager to learn. "They study every spare minute they can," writes an American observer there, "despite having to scrounge for food and work so laboriously."

American women visitors to Germany continue to be disturbed over the political neglect of women there. Anne O'Hare McCormick corroborates recent reports when she writes in the New York Times that the western occupying powers have "ignored and undervalued German women," even in some ways assumed the traditional attitude of German men toward them. Yet she points out that in Germany "for the next few critical years women will be the decisive majority." She adds: "Nobody but the Russians seem to give due weight to this pregnant fact."

In Greece where women do so much of the work, men so much of the political palavering, there is strong sentiment in governmental circles against women being allowed to vote in national elections and hold public offices. Right wing parties suspect as "leftist" anyone who mentions women's rights. Meanwhile there, as well as elsewhere in Europe where Bourbon stupidity can still assert itself, the Communists loudly advertise what they are doing for women.

WESTERN democracy cannot promise women voters a perfect world nor make politics easy for them by regimenting their thinking. But it could do more to encourage economically and politically the budding initiative of those women just coming out of the trauma of misery in which war left them.

For example, the Soviet Union sees that its Democratic Women's League in the German zone receives financial support and organization supplies. It sees that women members get public office. It loudly proclaims that it gives women equal pay with men for equal work.

In Bizonia some German women's groups are beginning to show an idealistic urge to build a better world. Some American observers think this is a significant grass roots movement that will spread, despite the handicap of hunger and back-breaking labor German women endure. Yet these German women's groups, remembering Hitler, are wary of help from the top. They want to run their own show. But they cannot go far without some financial backing or without sympathy and interest from women of this country.

There is no easy formula for making women of Europe or Asia realize that democracy is the only social order in which they can enjoy their full rights as human beings. But it is a problem to which this Government and its citizens could well be applying their wits.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Timetable Of Treachery

THE STRUGGLE is over, and the terror is already beginning in Prague. Yet there is still one important fact to note about the death of freedom in Czechoslovakia. The ruthless Communist power play which has just been executed with such precision was actually prepared in broad outline, in Moscow during the war, nearly five years ago.

The Communists overwhelmed the non-Communist majority of Czechs for a very simple reason—they already controlled every real source of power in the state. They obtained this control almost wholly by the efforts of two non-Communists, the Minister of War, Gen. Ludvik Svoboda, and the Deputy Premier and newly reinstated Socialist leader, Dr. Szdenek Fierlinger. These men acted, in effect, as agents of the Kremlin.

No one knows now, and perhaps no one will ever know, what traps the Kremlin laid or what inducements the Kremlin offered to Fierlinger and Svoboda, a career diplomat and a career soldier with decades of service behind them. But it is very definitely known that Fierlinger and Svoboda were captured, in wartime, when Svoboda commanded the Czech troops with the Red Army, and Fierlinger was the Czech government-in-exile Ambassador to Moscow. The evidence further indicates that their future roles were then already allotted to Svoboda and Fierlinger. Yet this was still the period when Generalissimo Stalin was assuring President Benes, President Roosevelt and every other Allied leader of his respect for Czechoslovakia's independence and freedom.

DURING THE war, loyal Czechs actually carried warnings of what was afoot in Moscow to President Benes in London. Benes made fruitless efforts to halt Svoboda's infiltration of pro-Communist officers into his Czech detachments. Benes also attempted to recall the slippery Fierlinger, ostensibly for consultation. Fierlinger, scenting trouble, arrogantly replied that he was too busy, and in any case his health was too bad for the journey. He added, threateningly, that his Soviet friends wanted him where he was.

Benes was caught in the toils of his own decision to orient Czechoslovakia toward the Soviet Union. He dared not flout the Soviets by repeating his order to Fierlinger, or intervene openly to control Svoboda. And thus the tragedy of Kosice inevitably occupied.

In the moment of the German collapse, at the end of the war, members of the Czech government-in-exile met with the Czech Communists at the little town of Kosice, to establish a new government. The Benes group had expected to make no great concessions to the Communists. But at Kosice they found an atmosphere of intrigue and intimidation. Fierlinger was the evil genius of the meeting. At one moment he overflowed with the slimy soothing syrup which is one of his specialties; at the next, he hinted threateningly of reprisals by the "Red Army" if a truly "sympathetic" regime were not formed.

AS A DIRECT outcome of Fierlinger's efforts, the War Ministry went to Svoboda; the crucial Ministries of Interior, Education and Information went to overt Communists, and, of course, Fierlinger himself entered the government in a strong position. The government was hardly formed before Svoboda began to extend his infiltration effort to the Czech army as a whole, handing the vital secret intelligence bodily over to the Communists. At the Interior Department, Communist Minister Nosek transformed the police into an organ of the Communist Party. And Fierlinger, as leader of the Socialists, labored to paralyze any opposition to this Communist seizure of the sources of Czech state power.

No real opposition arose until the terrible humiliation of last summer, when the Czech government changed its unanimous vote on the Marshall Plan by direct order from Stalin. By then, opposition was useless. The Socialists threw out Fierlinger and replaced him with Bohumil Lausman. Besides Lausman, courage was shown by a few other non-Communist leaders (notably not including Foreign Minister Jan Masaryk, the salon favorite in New York, who has played perhaps the most morally shabby game of all). But the hard fact remained that power was all in Communist hands. They began to use their power when the command was transmitted from the Kremlin a fortnight ago by the Soviet Undersecretary of State Zorin. Czechoslovakia fell, like a rotten apple.

There is a moral in this story for those who advocate friendly negotiation with the Soviets. Of what use are negotiations with a government which blandly promises one thing and secretly plots the opposite? There is also a warning. The fall of Czechoslovakia has not altered the world power balance. But the brutal methods employed and the suddenness of the coup have disclosed an important alteration in the Kremlin's timetable. It is not impossible that the world crisis will reach the acute and decisive stage in the next few months.

Washington Calling

Smear Against Condon

THE CURRENT loyalty witch hunt is shown in its shabbiest and meanest form in the attack on Dr. Edward U. Condon by the House Un-American Activities Committee. The committee's report is about as un-American as anything could be.

Childs

It relies almost on guilt by association. Because Dr. Condon, head of the National Bureau of Standards, talked to the wife of the Polish Ambassador and to two or three attaches of Soviet and satellite embassies, the committee demands his discharge.

"It is known," said a letter quoted by the committee and purportedly from the FBI, "that in February, 1947, Zlotowski (an attache in the Polish Embassy) purchased 270 books on atomic energy which had been published by the Department of Commerce."

The childishness of this would be funny if it were not so tragic. Repeatedly scientists have said that with publication of the Smythe report on atomic fission seven days after the first atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima, the essential "secret" of atomic energy was released to the world. That report was published on the specific authorization of Lieut. Gen. Leslie R. Groves. Most recently Chancellor Robert Hutchins of the University of Chicago in an article in the American magazine said after the Smythe report even a set of bomb-making blueprints would be a little additional help.

THE SMYTHE report has been on sale in every book store for two years. So much for the childish assumption that there is a "secret" which an American scientist could hand to a foreign scientist!

In connection with Dr. Condon's personal loyalty, some background is revealing. His record was carefully and thoroughly examined by the loyalty board created in the Department of Commerce under President Truman's executive order on the loyalty of Government employes.

Chairman of that three-man board was Adrian S. Fisher, who was the then solicitor of the Commerce Department. The board had all the material available to the House committee, including the FBI reports on his and his wife's associates.

But unlike the House committee, which never once gave Condon a chance to answer the vague accusations made against him, the board let him appear in his own behalf. Condon presented evidence bearing on his background and on the associations held against him.

That was last September. After detailed consideration of all the evidence, the board found no question concerning Dr. Condon's loyalty.

This meant that they found he was not in thrall to any alien ideology or any foreign power. In other words he is an American with a belief in the basic principles of the American Government.

THE BOARD found in the course of its inquiry that Dr. Condon is a thorough-going maverick. That is to say he believes in speaking his mind, even though the opinion he expresses may not be popular or in accord with the view of the majority at the moment. Often he has spoken bluntly with what many would consider indiscretion in a time of insecurity and hysteria such as the present—not about scientific matters but about his political beliefs which are certainly not those of Representative J. Parnell Thomas of the Un-American Committee. His wife has also spoken freely and sometimes, by current interpretation, indiscreetly.

This raises a pretty basic question. Is an American citizen, whether in Government or not, to be denied the right to any views other than those of the most narrow orthodoxy? To answer yes is to go against the broadest and deepest tradition of American freedom.

A postscript on the Comerce Department loyalty check is significant. Fisher, chairman of the board, was brought into the department to be solicitor by the present Secretary, W. Averell Harriman. A week ago Fisher resigned that post to become general counsel of the Atomic Energy Commission. Approval for the latter position implies a most searching FBI examination which is a further assurance of the validity of the report clearing Condon, which was prepared by Fisher.

To fair-minded Americans it will seem clear that Condon is being persecuted because he was appointed head of the Bureau of Standards by Henry Wallace when Wallace was Secretary of Commerce. A second reason is the smear campaign conducted against him in a small section of the press.

The FBI report leans on the word of a "self-confessed Soviet espionage agent." This is a dubious source since self-confession seems to be a sure way to gain acceptance. To make such vague and tenuous accusations without giving the victim a chance to state his own case is to make ourselves into the image of the enemy we profess to despise.

House Commerce Group Urges 30-Day Halt to Oil Exports

By The Associated Press

A 30-day embargo on exports of heating oils from East and Gulf Coast ports to help meet domestic shortages was recommended yesterday by the House Commerce Committee.

The proposal was made in a resolution by Representative Heselton (R., Mass.). It would become effective the day after its passage by the House and Senate.

The committee proposes to make it unlawful to ship kerosene, gas oil and distillate fuel oil, or residual fuel oil from the East and Gulf Coasts to any foreign country during the embargo. Punishment by fine and imprisonment would be provided for violation.

Exception is made for shipment for the armed forces. Exports to Canada would not be cut below Canada's voluntary import reduction program already in effect.

Heselton immediately reported the committee action to the House and met objection from Minority Leader Rayburn (D., Tex.), who said he regards the proposed embargo as "a harmful gesture" and expressed belief that if left alone "the oil situation will straighten itself out."

Meanwhile, a 5-month-old ban on exports of home heating sizes of coal will be lifted April 1, the Commerce Department said yesterday.

The department explained ample supplies for overseas shipment are expected to be available with the end of winter weather. The embargo was applied originally, it added, to protect home consumers.

World Bank Defers Action On Czech Loan Application

By Dillard Stokes

Post Reporter

The World Bank is in no hurry to act o nthe 350-million dollar loan asked by Czechoslovakia.

The latest country taken over by the Communists has not been turned down, but nothing is apt to be done about the loan for some time.

John J. McCloy—the World Bank president—said yesterday that the bank was going to wait for a more appropriate time to send a mission to Czechoslovakia to look into the basis for the loan.

No Formal Request

The Czech government has not formally asked for the 350 million dollars, but sent a letter of intent. On the basis of such letters the bank sends economic missions to make studies for use when formal requests are made.

McCloy said the bank—which has 46 nations for members—might put its securities on sale outside the United States. He said this would not be done at once, as the bank has about half a billion dollars on hand, and does not plan to make any big loans in Europe until the recovery program is settled. In the long run, however, McCloy said the bank wanted to reach a broader market.

"This is an international bank," he said, "and we want to get that concept abroad. The less it is considered as a solely American institution the better."

Possible Markets Cited

Sweden and Switzerland—both nonmember countries—might be markets for new issues of the bank's bonds.

McCloy said, too, that the bank wished to be known to the world as a channel for loans of two or three million—or of $750,000—as well as for those of hundreds of millions of dollars.

The bank's officials have had no talks with Russian spokesmen, McCloy said, in the last year, nor have they had any word from the Spanish government about wishing to join the list of members. The admission of a country, he pointed out, is up to the membership, requiring a majority of the voting strength.

Voluntary Rent Rise Clause Not Revived in Stopgap Law

By The Associated Press

The stop-gap extension of rent control does not revive the provision for "voluntary" rent increases up to 15 per cent in return for leases, the Office of the Housing Expediter said yesterday.

The 31-day rent law was signed by President Truman at Key West Friday. It continues ceilings through this month, to give Congress time to consider a longer extension.

The authority for making "voluntary" leases ran out December 31, a spokesman for Expediter Tighe E. Woods said. It assured tenants of rent ceilings through 1948.

The Senate has passed a bill extending rent controls until April 30, 1949. That measure, if approved by the House, would permit landlords and tenants to sign similar leases running through 1949, the spokesman said. It also would protect tenants who already hold such leases from further rent boosts.

Not every suit of good material and excellent tailoring is right for the man who wears it. Correct fitting is more than a mechanical procedure governed entirely by the inches on a tape measure. Alexandria Boys Admit 5 Holdups In Four States

Yoak said they admitted they held up the Swap Shop at Bluefield and took three .38-calibre revolvers, five German automatics and a box of ammunition.

He said they told of four other armed robberies in Maryland, Ohio and Kentucky since they left Alexandria February 20.

Facts on China Are Falsified, Bullitt Says

Former Ambassador William C. Bullitt yesterday accused Secretary Marshall of falsifying facts about American military aid to China.

"The record of the American Government in this matter is both dishonorable and disgraceful," said Bullitt, asking the House Foreign Affairs Committee to authorize 100 million dollars for immediate military help to the Chiang Kai-shek government.

He said the United States Government had not delivered a single combat plane to China since Marshall suspended deliveries in August, 1946. As for the Secretary's recent list of American war materials being sold to China, Bullitt said it "produces a totally deceptive impression."

Bullitt described Marshall as "a master of military logistics," but one who was sent to China under the "hopelessly wrong estimate" that the Chinese Communists were not really under Soviet control.

Contrary to U. S. Interests

"I think his acts in China were entirely contrary to the vital interest of the United States in the preservation of an independent China," he said.

Bullitt told the committee that the fall of the Chinese national government would "confront the United States with a single line from Bering Strait to Singapore under the control of Stalin." He said Mukden, now threatened by Chinese Communists, could still be saved if a relatively small amount of small-arms ammunition were flown there before April 1.

There was every sign that Bullitt's testimony made an impression on Republican members of the committee, who voted Monday to combine all foreign aid programs into a single bill.

"Your statement is enlightening and shocking," said Representative John M. Vorys (R., Ohio.). "This committee has attempted time and again to get action about China and the Orient, and we have found that certain things must be done by the executive or not at all.

"We can vote funds, but our experience has been that we can't make things happen. What can we do?"

Urges Sending Military Man

"I should think Congress, by joint resolution, might express the opinion that the Government should send to Nanking a military man of the highest quality to concert policies with the Generalissimo," said Bullitt, adding that Gen. Mark Clark might fill the bill. "Such a resolution might also contain an expression of the will of Congress that the Government should take steps to see that China doesn't fall under the rule of Stalin."

Vorys interrupted to say that if such a resolution were passed and not acted upon "there would be no remedy but impeachment."

"There is always a remedy at the hands of the voters," answered Bullitt, who said he had been a registered Democrat all his voting life.

He approved the Administration's proposal for 570 million dollars of economic aid to China, although he thought it had to be supplemented by military help. He also said he favored the European Recovery Program to the full extent of the Administration's $5,300,000,000 request for the first 12 months.

Kansas Wheat Festival King, Queen Due Here

By The Associated Press

The 4-H Club wheat festival king and queen of Kansas are due here today for a three-day stay.

The trip was awarded Marie Baresel, a 4-H Club girl from Geary County, Kans., and Elmo Mahoney, a young married Russell County, Kans., farmer, at the 1947 Kansas State Fair for outstanding farm achievements.

The two will see Congress in action, visit with their Congressmen, and do some sightseeing. They may meet Secretary of Agriculture Anderson.

Virginia House Passes $513,430,977 Appropriations Bill

Richmond, Va., March 2 (Spl).—Virginia's biennial general appropriation bill totaling $513,430,977, including committee amendments adding $7,435,926, passed the House by vote of 83 to 8. It now goes to the Senate.

The measure took three hours and 10 minutes to clear the House after it was made a matter of continuing order for the afternoon session. All amendments from the floor, but one, were rejected.

The exception was an amendment proposed by Delegate William J. Gibson, Fredericksburg, which the Appropriations Committee had agreed to support after it had reported the bill. It adds a one million dollar conditional appropriation to the $1,500,000 unconditionally set up in the bill for hospitals, to match Federal and local funds under the Hill-Burton Act.

Appropriations Chairman C. C. Louderback of Page, told the House in opening discussion that some 25 million dollars in added requests were presented to the committee after the Governor submitted the budget with its estimated surplus by July 1, 1950, of $7,500,000.

Louderback said the committee felt this surplus should be spread as wisely as possible among the needs presented. The committee amendments, he said, involved about four million dollars in additional capital outlays, three million dollars in current expenses, and $260,000 to meet appropriations in bills before the Assembly.

The House killed amendments proposed from the floor which sought to compel the Highway Department to establish a 75-cent-an-hour minimum for labor, and would have transferred $200,000 from the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts to Virginia Tech for a school for veterinary medicine.

Before turning to the budget bill, the House passed more than a dozen measures, including a bill providing continuation of highway allocations to counties which subsequently incorporate. Though introduced specifically for Arlington County, the measure was broadened to apply to any similar situation which might arise in the State.

Introduced by Arlington County Delegates Maynard Magruder and George Damm, the bill was prepared to insure continued State aid through road funds should Arlington County incorporate as a city. Such incorporation can be effected by referendum vote.

Another Arlington bill by the same sponsors was favorably reported out of the House Committee on Counties, Cities and Towns, and is expected to come up for full House action tomorrow. This bill authorizes a referendum in Arlington County on whether or not the Arlington School Board should issue bonds for a stadium and other county recreational facilities.

In other committee actions:

1. The Senate Finance Committee approved a bill providing for study and treatment of alcoholics and establishing a division of rehabilitation in the State Department of Health. It would appropriate $250,000 from the general fund to finance its purposes.

2. The Senate Committee on Public Institutions and Education approved a bill which would make non-Virginians who house their children in the State pay their share of costs for education in Virginia schools.

3. The House Committee on the Chesapeake and Its Tributaries referred to a subcommittee the bill sponsored by the Commission of Fisheries which raises various commercial seafood licenses, places a 10-cent-a-bushel tax on oysters planted by the State and makes a number of other changes in seafood laws.

House Declines To Order Probe In La. Tax Row

The House declined yesterday to direct an investigation into "possible fraudulent" income tax returns in Louisiana. The move for the inquiry grew out of charges made during the recent governorship campaign.

Representative Domengeaux (D., La.) charged in the House last month that Earl K. Long, now Democratic nominee for Governor, was guilty of income tax fraud in 1937 and 1938.

Domengeaux supported Long's opponent, Sam H. Jones, for the governorship.

Representative Hebert (D., La.) a Long supporter, subsequently denied Domengeaux's charges.

Representative Dirkson (R., Ill.) later offered a resolution for an investigation. It came up for a vote yesterday and the House turned it down, 239 to 77 on a roll call.

Representative Rayburn (D., Tex.), House Democratic leader, opposed the resolution as one which would "ultimately open every income tax return to everyone else."

Concert Scheduled

A joint concert will be presented by the University of Maryland's Men's Glee Club and Women's Chorus tomorrow at 8:30 p. m. in Ritchie Coliseum. Harlan Randall will direct and accompanists will be Charles A. Haslup and Virginia B. Burton.

Officials Differ On Control of Synthetic Rubber

By the United Press

Administration officials differed yesterday on when the Government should give up its control over the synthetic rubber plants it built during the war.

Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman asked a Senate Banking Subcommittee to give the Government indefinite authority to control the plants.

He said that "in the interests of national security there should be legislation definitely insuring positive support to the chemical rubber industry on a continuing basis." He was backed by H. B. McCoy, head of the Commerce Department's Office of Materials and Distribution.

But representatives of the State Department and Reconstruction Finance Corporation indorsed the June 30, 1950, date for ending controls proposed by Subcommittee Chairman John W. Bricker (R., Ohio). A House bill continuing controls until then was approved Monday by the House Rules Committee.

One on the Aisle—

Straus Leads His 'Hero' Waltz

By Richard L. Coe

From Yesterday's Late Editions

STRIKE ME WITH one of those beautiful trees they're shamefully ripping down on Dupont Circle, if "The Chocolate Soldier" isn't a more welcome arrival than you'd have thought for our operetta-packed season.

They're doing it with a lot of enthusiasm at the National and though it rather runs down after its effervescent, Shavian first act, it's got a lovely score and an above-average production, especially when you consider this year's "Rose Marie," "The Firefly" AND etcetera. Its not so much fun as Bobby Clark's "Sweethearts," not by a long sight, but it's got tuneful zest and last night's house was a happy one.

Some of the opening night pleasure came from Oscar Straus, who'd come down to conduct a portion of his 39-year-old score. While the audience seemed to follow the elderly composer's beat more closely than did the busy orchestra, it was a pleasantly sentimental occasion.

Contrary to advance notices, the composer (he's 78) conducted only a potpourri of melodies at the beginning of the third act, but the first notes of "My Hero" brought an affectionate salvo of applause from the gallery to the floor. That audience was greeting, with a kind of loving remembrance, a man whose imagination has brought millions happy moments through the years.

From Shaw's Comedy

As every operetta fan can tell you, "The Chocolate Soldier" is the musical offspring of Shaw's "Arms and the Man." The first act follows the G.B.S. with reasonable spirit and the quartet involved for the high jinks made it lively fun.

Keith Andes, a tall, good-looking blond guy, is the Swiss mercenary who works for any army that will pay him well. He hasn't got much of a voice, but he's long on grins and high spirits and after one movie role (in "The Farmer's Daughter"), I wouldn't be surprised if he turns out to be quite a celluloid hero himself. He does a lot for this revival.

With Ruth Gillette's leering elan poured into the role of the flirtatious mother, Doretta Morrow's youthful beauty gracing the lass who sings that waltz song and a lively Kaye Connor to prance about as a romantic cousin, that first act is as gay as you could ask.

Billy Gilbert's Antics

I've always thought Star Billy Gilbert was one of the least funny men in the Western Hemisphere. He did nothing last night to change my opinion, but in all fairness, a pack of other folks appeared to enjoy his sneezing and ad libbing. He's playing Papa Popoff, a role that's evidently irresistible to comedians who are made and not born.

Besides such established hits as the waltz and the title song, there are "Sympathy," "Lonely Women," "Seek the Spy," "Thank the Lord the War Is Over" (sic!), "Forgive" and the "Letter" song. He has added four others new to the score. Best of them is "After Today."

It's a good-looking revival, put together by such theater world names as Mielziner, Ballard, Guy Bolton and Felix Brentano. If you go for the grand Straus score, some cheerful people and old-fashioned operettas, you'll enjoy "The Chocolate Soldier."

"THE CHOCOLATE SOLDIER." J. H. Del Bondio and Hans Barisch present the operetta by Rudolph Bernauer and Leopold Jacobson. American version by Stanislaus Stange. With additional revisions and lyrics by Guy Bolton and Bernard Hanighen. Music by Oscar Strauss. Directed by Felix Brentano. Settings and lighting by Jo Mielziner. Costumes by Lucinda Ballard. Dances by George Balanchine. Music arrangements by Jay Blackton.

Lardizabel Fascinated by Death

Sixth Play in C. U. Festival Follows Trend of Solemnity

One outstanding characteristic Catholic University's playwriting festival has shown is the solemnity with which youth takes to writing.

Sixth in the series of seven manuscript plays is "The Portion of Foxes," by Jose Lardizabel, now running in the university theater on the campus through Saturday, March 13.

Like five other writers in the series, Lardizabel is impressed with evil. He very rightly takes a dim view of evil, but I for one am thoroughly fed up with being told I'm a sinful creature and should mend my ways. It may well be true, but it's not good theater.

This fascination for death and symbolism with which five of six plays have been concerned has completely bowled over the young Filipino writer. Lardizabel has a gift for word imagery, but has absolutely no control whatever for his flair. I presume this play, which concerns practically anything you might choose to think of, was the best of those so far unproduced, but surely some firm hand along the line should have held the reins on the student's word flow.

The production couldn't be finer physically. James Waring has evolved striking lightings and settings for this symbolic retrogression of an archvillain and Leo Brady has staged the play with an imagination more concrete than the author's.

Bill Callahan and Marilyn Hurley play the leading roles with evident, if unfounded, conviction and a large cast supports them handsomely.

For all that, I wish the university folk would stop trying to disguise their youth with solemn, soulful thoughts. If they really thought them, their meaning would be clear, not chaotic. R. L. C.

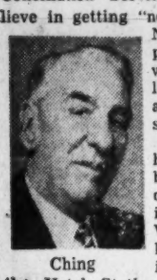
Avert Strikes, Not Stop Them, Is Ching Plea

By S. Oliver Goodman

Two-fisted Cyrus S. Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, doesn't believe in getting "noses bloodied."



Ching

Not if a little preventative work between labor and management can stop it.

That's what he told 74 members and guests of the Advertising Club of Washington at a luncheon meeting yesterday in the Hotel Statler. One of the principal tasks of the service he heads is to prevent long and costly strikes before they even get started, he said.

His is one Government agency "that's trying to put itself out of business." But he sees little hope of that for some time to come. Ching advocated more easily understood corporate financial statements so that union leaders and members will know "the economics of the situation" as well as management.

In answer to a question, he pointed out that polls indicate that although union members say they are bitterly against the Taft-Hartley Act, most of them favor many of the act's individual provisions.

LARGER QUARTERS: Realty Appraisal & Title Co., founded in 1899, is now housed in new quarters at 1424 K st. nw. President Moses J. Wright, who has been associated with the firm for 36 years, said yesterday the new offices contain three times the floor space of the former home at 1104 Vermont ave. For the student of early Washington history, Realty Appraisal's files and records, dating back to 1791, supply fascinating reading. Wright pointed out that names of early land tracts in this city were picturesque, but sometimes vulgar, too. The earliest transcript is dated 1791, a deed to a large tract known as "The Widow's Mite," which lay south of Constitution ave. and roughly to about the Ellipse.

ALIBI BUILDUP: This may soothe your conscience and the boss' wrath. The National Society of In-plant Feeding Engineers reports a survey of 50,000 industrial plants shows that the worker who pauses for coffee during a morning and afternoon rest period is 21 per cent more efficient at day's end than the one who works straight through. Many employes even "go back to their jobs with increased enthusiasm." This survey, naturally enough, is being circulated by Rudd-Melikian, Inc., of Philadelphia. It makes hot-coffee vending machines.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Nathaniel A. Owings, partner in the architectural firm which is working on the new Martin College of Engineering and Aeronautical Sciences at College Park, has been appointed chairman of the Chicago Plan Commission . . . Leonard C. Clifford has been named treasurer of Mutual Life Insurance Co of New York, succeeding Dwight S. Beebe, retired . . . Carl H. Bauer has been elected assistant to the president of Celotex Corp . . . Joseph I. Lubin has resigned as board chairman of United Cigar-Whelan Stores Corp . . , Clare M. Torrey has been admitted as a partner in Van Alstyne, Noel & Co . . . S. F. Tallaferro of Riggs National Bank and director of Julius Garfinckel & Co., Inc., has been elected a director of Brooks Bros., Garfinckel's New York subsidiary.

TOOL DISPOSAL: Machine tools should be allocated to Europe at once to 'nourish" its economy, Charles A. Simmons, former chief of the used tools division of the War Production Board, says. The War Assets Corporation has 200,000 or more machine tools could give ERP, thus saving about two billion dollars. Simmons is the president of the Simmons Machine Tool Corp.

EARNINGS: National Container Corp. and subsidiaries reported net income of $10,913,358 in 1947, equal to $4.13 a common share, compared with $5,605,896 or $2.27 a share in previous year. Other income reports follow:

New York Cotton

New York, March 2 (AP).—Cotton futures today closed 25 cents a bale higher to 45 cents lower. Trading was slow but prices moved over a wide range in thin dealings.

Most traders held to the sidelines pending further action on the foreign aid programs at Washington on which depends a large amount of cotton exports for the balance of the current season.

An early dealing losses extended to $1.25 a bale on scattered profittaking and hedging. Mill buying and short covering later rallied prices sharply to gains of better than $1 a bale, but the market failed to hold the best levels.

Graziano Fights Horne in Non-Title Bout Here

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., March 2.—My favorite ball player, Mickey Haefner, reports that it was a dull winter in southern Illinois. No sense huntin' because, he says, everybody in the world has got a gun these days and shoots up all the birds before the season's two days old. And it ain't like it used to be. Fishing, they're making it illegal to fish through the ice nowadays.

POVICH

No sense getting a job and working, either, in the off-season. So you make a thousand dollars, he says, and they take it away from you in taxes before you can get it home. Life's too short to scramble for an extra buck from October to April. So he glassed in the porch and built up that kitchen he's been working on for three years now.

He wasn't breaking his neck, either, getting into shape for spring training. That's what spring training is for, to get into shape. Only those dopes who let themselves get out of shape have to get into shape, anyway. He knows what he's supposed to weigh and how he's supposed to feel and he ain't going to vary two pounds all winter.

Anyway, he ain't aiming to overpower anybody with nine innings of fast-ball pitching. If he can't get by with his curve he won't get by, that's all. But there are a lot of big guys who wish they had his curve.

NAW, HE DIDN'T HAVE any contract trouble with Griffith, even if he was late signing. Says Griff always treats him all right, but there was talk you know that he might be traded to the Cleveland Indians. Didn't want to have a 1948 contract all signed if he went to Cleveland, because a player always figures to get maybe $500 or $1000 extra from a new club that has to sign him.

Figures he might have another good year or two left in him. Not getting any younger at 35, but wants to latch onto a big league salary for a couple of years more and then he won't have to worry. Still thinks he got a rotten start in the majors, who wouldn't take him until he was 30 because they thought he was too small. The bums he was pitching against and beating in the American Association got a crack at the majors before he did, and he figures he'd be in the minors yet if it wasn't for Griffith.

Maybe it was because Griff was a little pitcher himself that Haefner's size didn't scare him off, Mickey says. Anyway, he don't figure ever to be mad with Griff. There's about $8000 difference between what he's drawing now and what he was getting at Minneapolis, and even with the taxes, he takes home a lot more. If he ever gets that big year in, about 19 wins and say, only 10 defeats, he'll make Griff pay, though.

BACK IN THE MINORS he had a little the edge, he figures. Those umpires back there in the American Association didn't notice little things like Mickey's spitter. He tried it once up here and Bill McGowan caught him and he's been scared ever since to fool around with the moist pitch. It wasn't his best pitch, anyway, and his curve ball was spinning pretty good when he joined the Nats back in '43. He got a raise last year, even if he did win only ten and lose 14. He don't pay any attention to earned-run averages, Mickey says. It's what you win and what you lose that they pay off on, you don't get any credit when you lose the tough ones, 2-1 and 3-2. They're just a couple of more defeats. But if you can get in that 9-to-6 win, that's a nice one. He'd like to have about 20 of that kind, and then he'd make 'em pay.

There's no sense kidding himself about the Washington club this year, he says. It's going to be a job for any pitcher to win for this outfit. Too many rookies holding down regular jobs, and there's no sign that they can hit a lick. The pitcher who wins 15 games for the club this season could win 22 for most any other in the league.

BUT HE'S NOT SQUAWKING, he says. There ain't nothing to do but rebuild on this Washington club. They weren't going anywhere with what they had, and it's gonna be a long haul with what they've got, but he figures everybody will be trying. Personally he won't be putting out anything extra, because he always put out all he had, he says. He never won an easy game in his life, he says. He never was big enough.

They'll be paying him more than he was getting when he was on the good Washington clubs, so he isn't squawking at all. If he had gotten a break, though, he'd have been a 10-year man in the majors by this time. But there's no sense crying about that, either. A lot of guys never do get up there.

He never aimed to be a salary holdout any year he was in the majors. No salaries are bad ones in the big leagues, no matter if some of those lucky bums do get all that big money. A job for seven months that pays you about $13,000 ain't bad, 'specially if you came out of the southern Illinois coal mines, like Mickey did.

Training Camp Briefs:

Stan Spence Tried at First In Red Sox Infield Workout

Sarasota, Fla., March 2.—Outfielder Stan Spence reported for practice with the Boston Red Sox today and they handed him a first baseman's glove.

Stan worked out at first with Bobby Doerr on second, Johnny Pesky and Vern Stephens at short and Rookie Johnny Ostrowski at third. Spence was acquired by the Red Sox in a deal that sent Rookie Second Baseman Al Kozar to the Washington Nats.

Tabor Released

Clearwater, Fla., March 2 (AP). Jim Tabor, veteran third baseman, today was given his unconditional release by the Philadelphia Phillies.

Before giving Tabor the right to make a deal for himself, President Bob Carpenter tried to waive him to one of the other major league clubs and then attempted to sell him to a Pacific Coast League club. He hit .231 in 75 games last season.

It's Started Already

Tampa, Fla., March 2 (AP).—Hank Sauer made an auspicious debut today at the Cincinnati Reds' training camp.

Sauer, who hit 50 homers for Syracuse for the International League last season, belted a half-dozen balls over the left-field fence.

Lowrey Signs Up

Los Angeles, March 2 (U.P.).—Harry (Peanuts) Lowrey, veteran outfielder who is being shifted to third base this year, today signed his 1948 contract with the Chicago Cubs.

Rookie Has Confidence

Clearwater, Fla., March 2 (U.P.). Rookie Al Flair, a .308 hitter with New Orleans last season, today was given first choice at the starting first baseman's job with the Philadelphia Phillies.

Manager Ben Chapman told the towering Flair, "The job is yours until you convince me you can't make the grade." And Flair replied, "If I can't keep the position, I'm going to quit."

Musial Still Unsigned

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 2 (U.P.). — Stan Musial was in St. Petersburg, and St. Louis Cardinal general manager Bob Hannegan said he would be "glad" to confer with him. But that was as far as he went today in efforts to bring Stan into the fold. In addition to Musial, pitchers Brecheen and rookie Ray Yochim, have not signed.

Keller Looks Good

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 2 (U.P.).—The work of Outfielder Charlie Keller, out for the major part of last season with a back ailment, featured the New York Yankees' workout today. Keller, who formed part of an outfield augmented by Joe DiMaggio and Tommy Henrich, fielded impressively and ran without a trace of his recent spinal operation.

Miss Stecker, Miller Win Top Bowling Prizes

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Helen M. Stecker, a 95 average bowler, came through with a "last minute" 445 handicap set to win the $50 women's top prize as the week-long bowling tournament for the benefit of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club came to an end at 29 area alleys.

The men's $100 handicap prize was decided the first night of the tournament, when Jack Miller rolled his spectacular 506 set at Chevy Chase Ice Palace. His nearest competitor is Frank Mercurio, whose 501 handicap set nearly turned the tide Saturday night at Greenway.

Rolling in the Department of Interior Mixed League at Lafayette, Miss Stecker bowled games of 122, 131 and 123 for a 376 scratch set, second highest of the tournament.

With her handicap of 69 pins, she easily topped the 424 handicap sets rolled by Virginia Siegel and Frances (Frankie) Wilson early last week.

Only two important changes occurred in the final men's standings. Anthony Pournaras, bowling in the Penn Commercial League, scored the highest men's scratch set of the entire tournament, a 453, to take over the leadership in that division. Pournaras had games of 144, 143, and 166, and his handicap total of 486 is third highest reported.

The other change among the men was Frank A. Terna's 382-99—481 set which gave him fifth place in the men's handicap standings. Terna achieved his fine score

MacMillan Quits As Court Coach

Minneapolis, March 2 (AP).—Dave MacMillan today asked to be relieved of his duties as head basketball coach after 18 years at the University of Minnesota.

Frank McCormick, director of athletics, said he would accede to the request although with regret.

McCormick said he had no idea who MacMillan's successor would be.

"I have spoken to no prospect and have none in mind as yet," McCormick said. MacMillan asked that he be assigned to other duties in the athletic department. McCormick said this would be done.

Diz Brushes Up on Golf, Grammar

Dizzy Dean, one-time pitching great and more recently noted as the most ungrammatical man in radio, has been invited to play in the National Celebrities golf tournament at the Columbia Country Club, May 16.

Yesterday the following letter was received from 'Ol Diz, whose self-styled English in broadcasting major league baseball games in St. Louis evoked protests by school authorities in that area:

Dear Sir:

In regards to your letter of the 13th, about me participating in the second annual National Celebrities golf tournament, it is impossible right now for men to give you a definite answer.

I wrote my company 'n St. Louis and asked them to give me definite permission to be in Washington on the date mentioned, but as yet they have not decided on what they are going to have me do this summer.

As you no doubt know, we are not going to broadcast the Browns' games, so the Lord only knows where I will be on that day. But if you will accept my entry on the above basis, and if it is at all possible, I will be more than happy to participate.

I am very proud to have been invited to play up there, even though I am the rankest duffer right now, but by that time I will have brushed up on my game so that I will give somebody a battle.

Thanks again for the invitation and hope ot see you on May 16th.

Kindest personal regards,

Sincerely, Dizzy Dean,

All of which reads as if Diz must have brushed up on his English when he took out his niblick to brush up on his golf game.—BUS HAM.

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Top-seeded St. John's Cadets and Bethesda-Chevy Chase's Barons won their first round Metropolitan tournament games last night at Ritchie Coliseum and earned the right to meet there in the semifinals Friday night.

Before 1536 fans, the Cadets easily defeated Washington-Lee, 57-36, in the first game, and the Barons edged Roosevelt, 46-41 in the nightcap.

Two more first round games are on tonight's slate at Ritchie, where George Washington of Alexandria faces Maryland Park, and Central opposes Gonzaga. First game is at 7:30 p. m.

The second game was by fare the most interesting as the Barons and Riders exchanged the lead nine times. However, Bethesda's zone stopped Roosevelt with 1 point in the last quarter and the Barons pulled away in the last three minutes.

Washington and Lee's tight zone defense was ineffective in the face of St. John's swift passing in the first game.

With Jack George banking 'em in from side court, and Tom Fannon tapping 'em in when George missed, the Cadets were off to a 12-6 lead in the first quarter. Though the smaller and less experienced Little Generals continued to fight gamely, the Cadets increased their lead.

They were ahead, 32-15, at intermission; 48-26, at the end of the third quarter. The St. Johns reserves, who came in at the beginning of the fourth quarter added to the margin. George and Fannon wound up with 19 and nine. Zeke Zimmerman tallied 14 to pace Washington and Lee.

Nats Wynn Swims Safely Ashore After Boat Blast

Orlando, Fla., March 2.—Early Wynn, 17-game winner last season and top-salaried man on the Washington club, reported for the opening of spring training yesterday—but he had to swim for it.

He survived a motor boat blast and fire that destroyed the 26-foot craft of his brother-in-law, Earl Byron, at Venice on the Florida coast Sunday afternoon. Both swam 150 yards to shore.

An addict of boating, and owner of a speed boat in Washington, Wynn was on a pleasure cruise when, as he gave the craft full throttle, combustion followed in the motor box and flames leaped 20 feet high. Byron was singed about the face but Wynn was unharmed.

The blast was traced to faulty emptying of the gas tank with fuel running into the bilge water beneath the floorboards. The boat sank offshore.

Wynn has promised Owner Clark Griffith of the Nats that he will equip his own boat with every latest safety and firefighting equipment, to forestall an order to keep out of boats.

Nats Like Kid Catcher Named Okrie

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 2.—The Washington club's frenzied search for more hitting power has brought into focus in their spring training camp the 6-foot 1-inch, 185-pound figure of a rookie catcher named Len Okrie.

The club's bosses are glomming onto Okrie who was snagged away from the Chicago Cubs' farm chain last winter via the draft. He was claimed from Nashville after working his way up to the Southern Association from the Tri-State and Western Leagues.

Manager Joe Kuhel is chiefly intrigued by the .314 batting average Okire compiled at Fayetteville, N. C., last season before being promoted to Des Moines in the class A Western League. Al Evans, the club's No. 1 catcher, hit only .241 last season and thus is no fixture.

Dad Pitched for Detroit

Young Okrie is an impressively stacked 23-year-old; is of a baseball family. His father, Frankie Okrie, was a left-handed pitcher for the Detroit Tigers in 1919-2.0. He has a brother playing shortstop in the Wihte Sox chain and another brother playing th eoutfield in the minors.

Scout Mike Martin tabbed Okrie as talent for the Nats after observing him in the Tri-State last year where he was named a catcher on the league's all-star team. During the war, he served in the Navy and was a radioman in Alaska for three years.

His loud chatter behind the plate has been a highlight of the first two days of training at Tinker Field and if Okrie stays with the club, as he apparently will, his loud hustle will be in contrast to the general run of the Washington club.

He's one of the three catchers on the roster and thus is fated to stick inasmuch as the club plans to carry three catchers. He is rated a greater threat to Evans' regular job than Ken McCreight, the husky rookie from Charlotte who has played only 25 games in organized baseball.

He Loves His Work

In his youth in Detroit, young Okrie was a confirmed Mickey Cochrane fan and never aspired to any other job in baseball except catching. He demonstrated his wild enthusiasm for the game when he said: "Catching is more fun. You handle the ball more than anybody else and you can see more of the game than anybody else."

The Nats have the physical counterpart of the former left hander, Joe Krakauskas on their pitching staff in Rookie Southpaw Earl Davis, who weighs 190, is built like a fireplug and has big, bowed legs. . . . Manager Kuhel got his first look at Forrest Thompson, the southpaw who won 16 games for Atlanta last season, and liked what he saw. . . . Thompson is a chunky 30-year-old with a curve ball and apparent savy on the mound, and is rated a good hitter. . . . The longest balls of the first two days, however, have been swatted by Early Wynn. . . . Sid Hudson absented himself from practice today because of the illness of Mrs. Hudson. . . . The most perspiring athlete on the grounds today was Buck Newsom who warmed up on the sidelines for 15 minutes and melted off a pound a minute under the hot sun. . . . William Toenes, the Tampa-born Cuban who won 16 for Chattanooga last season, is rated a strong bidder for one of the relief pitching jobs, but as usual Tom Ferrick will be the No. one relief man.

Hockey Head Will Expel Gamblers

Lansing, Mich., March 2 (AP).—Clarence S. Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, today declared he had evidence of gambling in hockey which "warrants expulsions without a doubt."

Theevidence, turned over by Michigan authorities, does not identify any players by name, Campbell said. However, he embarked on trips to Chicago, Boston and New York to complete the investigation.

After a hasty examination of the evidence in private, Campbell said it implicated members of two National Hockey League teams, but that "nothing implicates the Chicago Blackhawks." He would not amplify.

The evidence was turned over by Detroit Police Commissioner Harry S. Troy on orders of Governor Sigler during a conference of State, Detroit and hockey officials on the situation.

Accepting a sealed brown envelope containing the evidence, Campbell and Toy retired to a private office to examine it.

Press Reports Correct

Campbell, returning in half an hour to meet reporters, said that "the information does not indicate anything beyond what has already been described in the press. The evidence alleges that the gambling activities were of a limited nature."

"I am impressed with this evidence," Campbell said, "it gives me a take-off point for my investigation."

Sigler instructed all State departments, and the corrections department in particular, to cooperate fully with Campbell's investigation.

Campbell said it would take him three or four days to complete his investigation. Though he reserved the right to make suspensions any time he felt justified, Campbell agreed to report the results of his investigation to Sigler next Monday.

Sigler gave Campbell permission to talk to James Tamer, held in quarantine in Southern Michigan's prison as a parole violator.

Detroit police and State Parole Board investigations which led to Tamer's arrest four days before his parole would have expired last month brought to light charges that hockey players had placed bets on games.

Previously in ordering the evidence turnde over, Sigler asked Campbell, "what will you do if you find a hockey player had taken money from a gambler to change the result of a game?"

"He would be out for life," snapped Campbell.

Brown or Rosati Boxes Stribling

Stribling, who dropped but one bout last year, scored recent victories over Kid Wolfe and Frank Lacey.

Rocky Gives His Purse to Charity in April 5 Bout

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

In an obvious attempt to restore himself to the good graces of the fight public, Middleweight Champion Rocky Graziano has agreed to meet Sonny Horne at Uline Arena April 5 and donate his purse to charity.

Formal announcement of Graziano's non-title appearance was made in New York yesterday in the offices of Al Weill, who with his associate, Goldie Ahearn, will promote the fight for the Liberty Athletic Club.

The Horne fight will be the first ring appearance for the shaggy headed New York champion since last July when he knocked out Tony Zale in Chicago to win the 160-pound title.

NBA Poll Clears Way

Barred indefinitely in his native New York for failure to report an alleged bribe, suspended for life in Illinois because he received a dishonorable discharge from the Army and frowned upon by boxing commissions in many States, Washington is one of the few large cities where Graziano is permitted to fight.

The way was cleared for him here by the D. C. Boxing Commission which initiated a poll in NBA States to determine whether Graziano would be allowed to fight in those States. The poll returned Graziano the winner by a whisker.

Although no figures were announced, it is believed that Graziano will receive 33½ per cent of the proceeds, Horne 20 per cent.

No specific charity was mentioned, but Graziano expressed a desire to contribute his end of the purse to the Infantile Paralysis Campaign and to funds used for combatting juvenile delinquency.

Gate of $70,000 in Prospect

In addition to the champion's purse, 10 per cent of the net proceeds also will be given to charity. The promoters anticipate a $70,000 gate with the arena scaled at $10 tops.

This will be Graziano's second meeting with Horne. They fought for the first time January 18, 1946, in Madison Square Garden with Graziano winning a split 10-round decision. At that time, Horne earned recognition by being the first fighter in seven to stay the distance with Rocky.

Heine Miller, chairman of the D. C. Boxing Commission, last night said Horne had been approved as a suitable opponent for Graziano. Miller also revealed that Horne was the No. 3 choice.

According to Miller, LaVerne Roach rejected a $12,500 offer to meet Graziano here and that Tommy Yarosz of Pittsburgh, the No. 2 choice, was injured recently in a losing stand against O'Neil Bell and thus eliminated himself.

Horne has shown here twice, defeating Aaron Perry in 1946 and Smuggy Hursey decisively two weeks ago at Uline Arena.

3 D. C. Boys Lose in Gloves

New York, March 2.—Three Washington entrants in the Eastern Golden Gloves Tournament of Champions were defeated tonight in quarterfinal bouts at Ridgewood Grove Arena.

Jimmy Caraway, regarded as Washington's best bet in the tourney, was knocked out by William Morgan of Newark in 1:52 of the third round; Dave Primrose, Washington 112-pounder, lost a decision to Lloyd Holmes of Newark, and Frankie Stellato, area Marine, dropped a decision to a third Newark fighter, Pete Dowd.

Merrick Club Wins

Merrick Boys' Club defeated the Georgetown Branch of the Boys' Club of Washington, 33-9, in a games room tournament yesterday at Merrick.

Football Star Gets 'B' in English

Beaming with pride over his midterm exam marks which included a "B" in English, a local college football star exclaimed to a friend: "B in English, gosh! Wait 'til me mother sees this" . . . Although four of his rivals had finished playing for the season and the fifth, Bill aCntwell, of George Washington, was 99 points behind and had only one game left, the Associated Press refused to concede the Southern Conference scoring championship to Chet Giermak, of William and Mary, Monday. Cantwell got 11 points in his last effort—against Maryland, only 88 short of tieing Giermak . . . The New York Knickerbockers and Philadelphia Warriors both selected Bob Feerick, of the Caps, on their all-opponents team . . . Basketball Association of American officials receive $50 per game, plus all expenses.

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez of Turner's Arena, is holding back his ace drawwing card, Featherweight Jimmy Cooper, for a March 15 date just in case the Liberty Athletic Club stages a show that same evening. Cooper, according to Menendez, was responsible for that $3600 house January 23 when the two fight clubs both ran shows . . . The District Boxing Commission came within an ounce of running afoul of one of its own laws Monday night. Frank Pucci weighed only 120 pounds with his tiff with Red Gaddis, who hit 126, and local rules forbid a contest in the lighter divisions when there's more than a six-pound pull . . . That healthy, beefy looking lot of youngsters you see at College Park, Md., these days are frosh football players Tatum & Co. rounded up during the lean December days.

A Max Schmeling-Jackie Cranford bout at Griffith Stadium in May is in the works, provided, of course, the way is cleared for Der Max to return to the United States. At 42, he'd be barred from fighting only in New York where fighters over 39 aren't licensed . . . Heinie Miller's suggestion that floored fighters be required to take a nine count before resuming met with hearty endorsements from Abe Greene, president of the NBA, and Leon Rains, chairman of the Pennsylvania Boxing Commission . . . Miller, incidentally, has just published (at 50 cents a copy) a pamphlet labeled "A Defense of Boxing." . . . When George Washington and Maryland play football at Griffith Stadium this fall, Maryland will make more money out of the game than the Colonials. G. W. is the home team and must pay the 15 per cent stadium rental out of its share of the receipts.

Tony (WWDC) Wakeman caused a mild furor last Saturday when he announced on his "All Sports Parade" that Eastern had protested Central's vioctory in the Interhigh court semifinals, had won the protest and would play Roosevelt for the title in place of Central. . . . Tony's information came from prankster who said he was a Washington newspaperman. Wakeman didn't check the "tip," regretfully, and as a resul spent the rest of the time on his show apalogizing and correcting his "scoop." . . . Bob (WINX) Wolff is in Orlando, Fla., resting his vocal chords, but conditioning his muscles working out with the Nats. . . . Maryland loses a topflight coach and a grade A fellow in Walter Driskill who'll return to Oklahoma. The Sooner offer must have been enticing as Driskill was making in the neighborhood of $7500 as an assistant coach at Terpville.

Hank Says He Needs a Week

Tucson, Ariz., March 2 (AP).—Big Hank Greenberg indicated today it would be at least week or more before he decides whether or not to remain in baseball as an active player.

The former American League home run king is working out with the Cleveland Indians to test his ailing right arm and 37-year-old legs. If he decides to hang up his spikes for good, there's still a place for him as a Tribe coach.

Poker at Haights':

Agatha Finds Six Aces in Hilda's Hand

By Walter Haight

OUR FAMILY POKER game this week was staged at my house—referred to as Haight's Cave of the Winds, when I'm at home and located in Marrietta Park, a suburb of the Georgia Avenue carbarn.

Haight

As usual, the women gathered in the living room and "cut up" almost everybody "at the office." Finally Cousin Hilda piped, "Let's play cards, I'm losing money."

That crack reminds me of the extent to which the women have coin-warred their way into our games—even steal our pet lines.

For instance, if Aunt Jen's four aces run second to Uncle Fred's five tens and he begins to explain his technique, she ups with, "Tell that story on your own time, Big Boy. It's your deal."

Should Uncle Les hesitate and say, "I don't know whether I can beat you with what you're got showing, but I might call you just for percentage." Aunt Agatha is likely to snap, "Let 'Percentage' do his own calling. Get that chip in there or else."

If Hubby Dick tries to give Hilda some advice when she is undecided about matching the "baseball" pot, she's more than apt to retort, "Why don't you and Hoyle collaborate on a book?"

YOU WOULD THINK women would be satisfied with pilfering our poker patter, but they aren't, and what's more they still insert their own jab. At times, its confusing.

Jean was shuffling the cards one night while describing a hat she had purchased that day. After she dealt, her better-half's first up card was an eight.

"How about that?" he chuckled, "A wild one on the first card."

"Why don't you get in the game, Les?" she said, "We're playing 'Dr. Pepper' and you know eights aren't wild."

"I heard you say eight—four—nine as I live and breathe," he protested.

"Why don't you wake up, Sap," she came back, "That was price of the hat—$8.49. And, by the way, don't you think you have made enough trips to the kitchen."

Out-talked, we men are forced to other methods for attention like tossing in round crackers for chips or remarking, "Get the fly-swatter the moths are terrible" when Agatha opens her one-way purse.

The women win their share of the time, but, at the risk of rebuttal from the paper's Women's Department, I will say that as a class they are poor poker players.

WHEN THE GALS first shifted from raising families to raising pots, the men aided them by helping diagnose the value of their hands. If it wasn't for this rule—the hand speaks for itself—we men wouldn't have to sneak chips off their piles.

For instance, with a big pot at stake, Fred, Les and I called Hilda's bet. She spread out her seven cards and announced, "I have a full house—aces on tens." But almost in the same breath she yelled, "I mean four aces—the threes are wild, too."

Les determined that his straight flush was higher than mine and reached to rake in the pot.

Aunt Agatha, who dropped out on the first raise, scanned Hilda's cards and exclaimed, "Wait a minute, Les. She has three wild cards. That makes six aces."

Les gave Agatha one of those mind-your-own-business stares and grunted, "See if you can't find seven."

I hope somebody reminds me to side our fireplace accessories next time. Perhaps the poker wouldn't dent my fat head, but there are the andirons, if you know what I mean.

Terps, GW Will Play At Durham

Two games open the Southern Conference basketball tourney at Durham, N. C., tonight but the local entrants — second-seeded George Washington and Maryland—won't see action until tomorrow.

Wake Forest and William and Mary touch off the 10-team playoff 7:30 tonight. In the second game, South Carolina faces Duke, playing on its home court.

It's the latter contest that George Washington's interested in. The Colonials meet the winner tomorrow night at 9. Either Duke or South Carolina figures to give Coach Otts Zahn's squad trouble.

While GW supporters were heartened by the easy 55-39 win over Maryland in its last regularly scheduled game here Monday, previous games with both teams indicate that the Colonials will have to step to survive the first round.

GW shaded Duke there, 48-47, and split two games with South Carolina's Gamecocks, losing here, 70-64, and winning there, 60-49.

By its loss to the Colonials, Maryland toppled from fourth to seventh place in final Conference standings. The Terps (9-7) are slated to meet Davidson (10-7) tomorrow at 4 p. m.

Although Maryland holds a 59-58 decision over Davidson, the Wildcats finished with a rush and had a player selected on the first and second All-Conference teams picked by the coaches.

In its last game, Davidson played mighty N. C. State to a half-time tie and worried the Wolfpack before finally succumbing, 65-54.

Elmore Harris Sold To Chicago by Dodgers

Brooklyn, March 2 (AP).—Elmore Harris, one-time Morgan State football great and an outstanding sprinter, was sold to the Chicago Rockets of the All-American Conference today by the Brooklyn football Dodgers. No price was announced.

America, Catholic Go To Baltimore

American U. and Catholic U. start tournament play in the Mason-Dixon Conference at Baltimore tomorrow and the Eagles are conceded a fair chance of upsetting favored Loyola, host team, for the title.

The Cardinals meet Randolph-Macon in the first game tomorrow afternoon and American, with a 10-2 Conference record, faces Towson Teachers an easy victim early this season.

Although Randolph-Macon won a close decision over Catholic U. at Ashland, Va., the Cardinals feel confident that they'll avenge the setback. Their tourney hopes, though, depend largely on the condition of Capt. Gene Szklarz's ankle.

Loyola, spaked by Jim Lacy, probably the area's outstanding college player, scored 11 victories in 12 Conference starts. That one loss was administered by American U. in a 54-48 upset in the final game.

And that's the reason Staff Cassell's boys should be in the fight for the championship. The Eagles surprised by playing better ball after Reggie Crockett, Don Hillock and Burt Fugler left them.

Bob Lamon, former Eastern High stalwart, went on a scoring rampage to offset the loss of the three regulars. He finished fourth for District scoring honors with 239 points in 25 games, the bulk of them scored in the second half of the season.

The Catholic U. and American U. Jayvee teams, on the basis of their records this season, were selected to play for the second-team Conference championship in a preliminary game Saturday night. They split two games this season, American winning, 50-48, and losing, 52-43.

Bunker Oil Killed Ducks, Officials Say

Edgewood, Md., March 2 (AP).—Dead ducks and fish dotted the waters of Bush River in Upper Chesapeake Bay today, and the Army, the Coast Guard and the State of Maryland all wanted to know why.

The ducks became soaked in bunker oil, probably from a passing ship, said the Coast Guard.

They probably suffocated when oil covered their bills, guessed Edward M. Barry, chief of game and fish management of the State Game Inland Fish Commission.

They probably starved to death when their feathers soaked up so much oil they couldn't dive for food, Lieut. Merritt W. Briggs, public information officer of the Army Chemical Center here, said he had heard from local sportsmen.

"There was no evidence of oil" on eight canvasbacks brought to the Patuxent Wildlife Research Refuge at College Park, said Dr. Don Coburn, pathologist.

He said the bodies were being analyzed for possible poisoning, perhaps from white phosphorus or other munitions fired at the Army Chemical Center or at the Aberdeen Proving Grounds.

"I can guarantee it was not white phosphorous," said Lieutenant Briggs. "We have had orders not to fire phosphorous over water for the past 10 years."

The Army engineers have been asked to check the possibility that oil or chemicals seeped into Bush river from Aberdeen or Edgewood's munitions plants, said Barry.

Tatum Asks For Meade As Assistant

Athletic Director Jim Tatum of Maryland, said last night he will request that Jim Meade be made a full time football assistant to replace Walter Driskill.

Driskill quit his Maryland post to return to Oklahoma as assistant football coach. Meade, a Maryland graduate and former Redskin fullback, is attached to the physical education department at Maryland. He helped out as a backfield coach last year.

Tatum said he would also ask Dr. H. C. Byrd, Maryland president, to permit Sully Krouse, former Terp lineman and present wrestling coach, to help out with football.

Spring football practice begins at Maryland Monday.

If the transfer of Meade from the physical education department to the athletic department is approved, the Terps will have five full time fotball coaches. In addition to Tatum, head coach, other coaches are George Barclay, Bill Meek and Houston Elder.

Pennsy Boxers May Soon Have Brains Examined

Pittsburgh, March 2 (AP).—A brain tester which won't make boxers smarter but may save their lives soon may be put in use here.

Commissioner John Montgomery said today he plans to ask the Pennsylvania Boxing Commission for permission to use the devise—an electro-encepelograph—on all boxers seeking bouts in western Pennsylvania.

The encephelograph dtermines the amount of injury suffered by a person's brain.

Montgomery also plans to submit his recommendation to the National Boxing Association. He said fighters, not necessarily knocked out, but known to have suffered head injuries would be tested.

"The plan has the approval of local physicians, many of whom have told me they are interested in the project from a clinical standpoint," declared Montgomery.

Weary Hoyas End Season

Georgetown travels to Penn State tonight and plays at Villanova tomorrow night to wind up its 27-game basketball schedule.

The Hoyas lost a close one to State here, 42-40, and surprised Villanova, 64-46. Even two victories will leave the Hoyas (11-14) below the .500 mark.

However, the games do give Georgetown's Ray Corley and Tommy O'Keefe a chance to pass Maryland's Bill Brown, District scoring leader after 23 regularly scheduled games.

Brown finished with 252 points for a 10.9 average. Corley has 242 points (9.7 average) for 25 games and O'Keefe 236 (9.4) for the same number of contests. High-scoring by either could give them a better average as well as higher total.

Ruffin Quits Ring

New York, March 2 (U.P.).—Bobby Ruffin of Astoria, N. Y., former lightweight contender, announced his retirement from the ring today because of an eye injury.

Across the Nation:

Pistol Pete Has Rare Operation

Annapolis, Md., March 2 (AP).—Pistol Pete Williams, Navy football back and cocaptain, was recuperating today from a rare operation on the ankle, but his doctors say it won't interfere with his grid work.

Capt. Kermit Perkins, chief of surgery, at the Naval Academy Hospital, said Williams underwent the operation Saturday.

The ankle condition was apparently the result of a football injury, Captain Perkins said. It involved a small loose bone known as the astreagulus and held the danger of becoming a bothersome "floating body."

Arnovich Manager

Chicago, March 2 (AP).—Appointment of Morrie Arnovich, former National League outfielder, as playing-manager of the Selma, Ala., club in the Class B Southeastern League, was announced today by the Chicago Cubs.

Arnovich, 34, joined the Cubs' organization last year as manager of the Bruins' Hutchinson, Kans., club in the Western Association and Davenport, Ia., of the Three-I League.

Girl Carries On

Philadelphia, March 2 (AP).—A few minutes before 15-year-old Jane Atchinson won the breast stroke event in a scholastic swimming meet, her father collapsed among the crowd.

The young swimmer was assured that her father would receive proper medical care and went on to win her event last night—but while she was swimming in the Bartram High-Coatesville (Pa.) meet, her father died on the way to a hospital.

Bethesda Girls Win Title

The Bethesda-Chevy Chase High girls defeated Hyattsville, 35-33, yesterday at Blair gym. The victory gives B.-C. C. the District 2, Class A basketball championship of Maryland. Jerry Walker led the winners with 2[illegible] points.

Cranford's Opponent Suspended for Fouls

Pittsburgh, March 2 (AP).—Pennsylvania Boxing Commissioner John Montgomery today handed Heavyweight Art Swiden a temporary suspension at a hearing called to review the Braddock, Pa., fighter's disqualification in a bout last night.

Swiden was waved to his corner in the eighth round of a 10-round, main event fight at the Gardens with Jackie Cranford, of Washington, D. C. Referee Fred Mastrean said Swiden fouled repeatedly.

Albany, March 2 (U.P.).—The Senate today confirmed Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's appointment of Lieut. Col. Edward P. F. (Eddie) Eagan as chairman of the State Athletic Commission over vigorous Democratic opposition.

Eagan's confirmation followed overwhelming defeat of a Democratic attempt to force a $50,000 investigation of the conduct of boxing in the State. The motion was lost, 15-38.

Help With the Menu

The Washington Post

PLEASANT LUNCH—Washington's waitresses can help along the courtesy campaign, and Miss Marge Hines of 1314 Massachusetts ave. nw., a waitress in the Willard Coffee Shop, is doing her part. The customer is Miss Anne Barish, 3701 13th st. nw.

Courtesy a 50-50 Business, Restaurant People Realize

In one sector of Washington life, there's already considerable understanding that courtesy is a 50-50 business.

In line with the Washington Board of Trade campaign to make every local resident conscious of the value of courtesy, The Washington Post yesterday interviewed representatives of another segment of the service business—the restaurants—to see what courtesy kinks exist there.

Miss Anne Barish of 3701 13th st. nw., a customer in the Willard Coffee Shop yesterday said she had no particular fault to find with courtesy of waiters and waitresses.

"They are human beings, just like everyone else, and I find that when I am courteous to them, they are courteous to me," she explained.

From the standpoint of the waitresses, Miss Marge Hines, of 1314 Massachusetts ave. nw., who has been working at the Willard Coffee Shop for the past two years, also had few complaints.

She does, however, wish customers wouldn't ask for service in a hurry because they have to catch a plane, train, bus or show—and then linger over their coffee for a half hour.

Another complaint, Miss Hines said, is "When I ask a guest for his order and he keeps on conversing with his dinner companion instead of giving the order."

The courtesy campaign, which has the official indorsement of the District Board of Commissioners, will continue through March 22, when a mass courtesy rally will be held at Constitution Hall.

Md. Fisheries Row May Put Meeting Off

Annapolis, Md., March 2 (AP).—It was undecided tonight whether the embattled Tidewater Fisheries Commission will meet tomorrow.

David H. Wallace, executive secretary, said he had conferred with John E. Clark, chairman, and Clark thought it best not to hold a regular meeting tomorrow.

Governor Lane has requested Clark to resign after a prolonged controversy over the duties of Capt. Amos S. Creighton. Clark has not indicated his intentions.

Wallace said he had talked with Commissioners Allan A. Sollers and George T. Harrison, but did not know whether a meeting would be held.

Sollers thought it inadvisable to hold a meeting, Wallace said, and Harrison said earlier he expected a meeting would be held.

Counter-Offensive To Pay Raise Drive Opens on the Hill

ATTACK: A counter-offensive to the Federal employe pay raise campaign has been started on Capitol Hill. A subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee has called on each of the 30-odd independent agencies to compare salaries paid in 1939 with those of today. Chairman Reed (R., Kans.) made this explanation:

"This is designed to offset the impression that Federal employes haven't had an increase in salary since before the war. I'm sure the agencies' own figures will show that their employes have had substantial increases in salary since 1939."

The average white-collar Federal employe has had a salary increase of about 33 per cent since 1939. But the cost of living has shot up about 67 per cent in that period.

Meantime, AFL's American Federation of Government Employes is conducting a poll of House members on the pay raise issue. President James Burns has wired each of them for support of a minimum increase of $800 for all Federal workers. The 90 responses so far all favor "substantial" pay raises. Three House members would go up to $1000.

About 25 or more House members who favor pay raises will be heard at today's session of the House Civil Service Committee, and another batch tomorrow.

REVENUE: An Internal Revenue official yesterday told the Senate Civil Service Committee his agency can't get and keep good employes at today's wage scales. Deputy Commissioner Stewart Berkshire said many employes come into his agency, are given costly training, and resign when they become efficient in their work. He added many revenue lawyers and tax experts get private jobs at much higher salaries.

VA: It doesn't plan to seek additional funds from Congress to prevent the firing of about 8500 employes. Sam Moore, VA budget director, told the House Civil Service Committee yesterday, he opposes any request for money to keep employes temporarily "unless we are given the money to keep them on next year."

With the new fiscal year beginning July 1, the proposed new VA budget doesn't provide funds for the 8500 people. He insisted there is no point in keeping these people on the rolls another three months.

Chairman Rogers said she had been "hounding" Administrator Carl Gray to ask Congress for enough new money to continue the jobs of the 8500. She added that other members were swamped with complaints from veterans that VA services to them are being curtailed.

Incidentally, the lay-off here will have a far smaller effect than was first announced. Thirty-day lay-off notices were sent out Monday and yesterday to 180 employes. About 50 more will go out before the end of this week and that will complete the job. The repeated estimates of 1400 to be fired here is a phony. Most of the people to be fired are long-service nonveterans.

NOTES: Ray Sawyer is to rejoin the legal staff at Federal Communications Commission. He has been on leave for more than a year while he was the hard-hitting national commander of AMVETS . . . The House has passed a bill to permit several thousand postal employes who were illegally promoted to keep their promotions. The comptroller general insists the affected employes refund the promotion money . . . Several Federal agencies have urged the Civil Service Commission to end the reemployment rights of Federal employes who transferred to war agencies during the war. The commission is sympathetic. The cut-off date will be several months hence.

DEBATE: A bill that would confer permanent Civil Service status on a number of employes is being debated by Civil Service. This is the picture:

No employe who was appointed to Government after March 16, 1942—and a few before that date—was allowed to win Civil Service status until several months after the war. But a good many people affected by the arbitrary cut-off date took and passed open competitive tests and it was just their tough luck that they weren't appointed until after March 16.

A bill in the House and Senate would confer status on these people. The Civil Service committees in both houses have insisted on a report from the commission on it. The commission hasn't officially taken a stand, but it's a good bet it will oppose the measure.

CENSUS: This agency faces a sizable personnel cut. The House Appropriations Committee has recommended a three million dollar slash.

However, Census has taken on about 200 CAF-3 clerks here in the last two weeks to work on the census of manufacturers, and plans to hire about 300 low-paid clerical people in the next month. If the cuts stands, most of these new employes will be laid off and permanent employes in other activities will be shifted to their jobs.

Children of Slain Grocer Weep As They Comprehend Fact

The Washington Post

GROCER'S DAUGHTERS—The three motherless girls of Meyer Meyerovitch, fatally shot in his grocery store, did not understand that their father was dead when they posed for this picture. Left to right are Eloise, Lorraine and Clare

Grief comes slowly to children and then it touches them gently as is right.

So it was yesterday at 435 Ingraham st. nw., the home of Meyer Meyrovitch, 39, who was shot to death Monday night in his store at 90 O st. nw.

There was Lorraine, 7, and Eloise and Clara, the 10-year-old twins, children of the slain storekeeper.

Meyerovitch's sister, Mrs. Betty Taishoff, did not tell the children Monday night that their father had died. But se knew it had to be done yesterday.

When she told them in a low, gentle voice they looked at her wonderingly. There was still a mystery hovering above them; they still did not fully comprehend.

Later, while Mrs. Taishoff talked about her brother, the contagion reached out and touched them In the back of the house, where they had been taken, they began to cry. It was the crying of children knowing there is sadness but not understanding why.

Mrs. Taishoff, her eyes reddened and still moist, related how her brother, a native of Russia, had come to this country in 1924. How in 1929 he opened his grocery store—Meyer's Market—at the O st. address and won the regard of his customers.

How he met and married Celia Brickman, a native of Baltimore, about 12 years ago.

And how sadness had come to him four months after the birth of his youngest daughter. His wife died of a tonsil infection.

Mrs. Taishoff said she and her husband, Sol, provided a home for Meyrovitch and his three motherless children after the wife's death. Mrs. Taishoff has been a mother to the girls. Now, she feels, her husband must serve as their father.

The Taishoffs will continue to look after the girls "until they get married, I guess," said the aunt. The store? They'll probably sell it. Mrs. Taishoff said her husband, an upholsterer, doubts that he could operate a grocery business.

While Mrs. Taishoff talked, relatives and friends called and silently entered the house of mourning. There was talk . . . talk about why it had happened . . . who could have done it . . . what must be done now.

"There was no reason for him to die," said Mrs. Taishoff vacantly. "It must have been a stranger. It must have. He didn't have any enemies."

D. C. Police Do Extra Duty; 2 Men Hold Up Beauty Salon

ing of two cab drivers, Howard Jones, 37, of 417 Irving st. nw., and James Hardy, 32, of 647 G st. ne., during the weekend, spurred police to action.

Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett ordered:

1. More than 200 additional uniformed policemen to patrol city streets last night.

2. All detectives and plainclothesmen to remain on continuous duty.

3. That all annual leave in the department be canceled temporarily except in cases of extreme emergency.

4. Posting of rewards of $300 each—a total of $900—for information leading to arrest and conviction of the slayers in the three murder cases.

Mapor Barrett's order will more than double the force during the period from 6 p. m. to midnight. The entire day shift, normally relieved at 4 p. m., will report back at 6 p. m. and work to 10 p. m. The regular midnight shift has been ordered to report at 10 p. m.

Autopsy Report

An autopsy on the body of Meyrovitch, father of three motherless children, disclosed yesterday that the bullet which killed him entered his chest below the right shoulder, pierced his rig' lung and spinal column and lodged in the flesh of his back.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said the bullet passed from the right to the left side of the body. He said death was not instantaneous, but occurred within a short while.

Police sources admitted they were working on the theory that the cab driver killers and the slayer of the grocer were not the same persons.

There was the matter of the bullets, for example. The slugs which killed the cab drivers were not found (having passed completely through their bodies), but their caliber apparently was larger than that of the slug which ended the life of Meyrovitch.

Descriptions Differ

Ten, too, the description of the suspect flashed yesterday in connection with the Meyrovitch murder and those obtained of the hacker killers do not jibe.

One of the cab drivers, Hardy, lived long enough to give police a description of his assailants, both of them Negroes. He said one was light skinned, 25 to 28 years old, 5 feet 9, slim build and wearing a leather-like jacket. His companion was dark skinned, 5 feet 8, slender build and wore a cap and a tight fitting jacket.

The second cab driver, Jones, was found with a bullet in his head in a narrow alley behind the Andrews Paper Co. at 804 1st st. se. at about 8 a. m. Saturday. Hardy had been found eight hours earlier, shot through the waist, less than a block away. Both men had been severely beaten. Hardy died in Casualty Hospital Saturday night.

Motorist May Have Clew

In connection with the cab driver murders, police said yesterday that a car owner here may be to furnish some assistance if he comes forward.

They said the man, who drives a light red, five-passenger convertible coupe or roadster with light colored wheels, stopped in the 1100 block of New Jersey ave. se. between 8 and 9 p. m. last Friday night and helped two Negroes push a stalled Diplomat cab.

Police believe the men he assisted were the murderers of the cab drivers. Witnesses who watched the stalled cab episode said the two men later hailed a cab answering the description of the one driven by Jones.

As for the Meyrovitch murder, police are not certain whether his killer made off with any cash. In the grocer's pockets were $1587 in cash and $404 in eight Government checks.

There was about $40 in change in the cash register, but no bills. Did the killer, in his haste, scoop only the bills from the cash register? Police wish they knew.

Coins Found on Floor

Several coins were found on the floor in front of the counter. One theory is that the killer, in snatching for bills in the register, dislodged some of the change which fell to the floor.

But one detective official, who does not think any money was taken, disagrees with this version. His reasoning is that if the coins were dislodged from the register they would have fallen behind the counter.

Then, too, it is not certain that Meyrovitch kept bills in his register. Neighbors, some of whom had traded with him since he started his business in 1929, say it was his custom to make change from a large roll of bills he carried in his pocket.

Police think the killer may have been a stranger who entered the store and posed as a customer. He probably ordered some grocery items. On the counter, when the body was found, was a paper bag containing bread and coffee.

Perhaps Meyrovitch made a move which alarmed the itchy-fingered visitor. Whatever the cause, there was a roar and the grocer fell behind his counter, face downward.

The body was discovered at about 8:15 p. m. by Henry Couch, 53, of 1337 1st st. nw., janitor at Dunbar High School.

Although police are known to have questioned at least nine suspects in connection with the cab driver murders, all of them have been cleared.

One 17-year-old Negro youth who was considered a prime suspect was cleared yesterday after lengthy questioning. However, the youth did admit he was the bandit who robbed a cab driver at gunpoint here Sunday night and later was foiled in an attempt to hold up a filling station. He was turned over to juvenile authorities.

Six Unsolved Killings

The murder of Meyrovitch brings to six the number of unsolved slayings in the District in the past 18 months. Police estimated this to be the highest number for any period in several decades.

Still unsolved are the murders of James A. Kemp, 24, found stabbed to death September 1, 1946, near his home, 335 37th pl. se.; Mrs. Adele G. Johnson, 62, fatally shot last September 18 by a prowler in the rear of her basement apartment at 1728 New Hampshire ave. nw., and Dorothy Belle Woods, 32, of no fixed address, who was found strangled in an alley between 6th st. and the 1600 block of Marion st. nw. on December 17.

2 Surgeons Assail Setup At Gallinger

Advocate Removal Of D. C. Control; Just 'Mudslinging,' Dr. Ruhland Retorts

Embattled Gallinger Hospital, a city institution, was blasted anew yesterday.

A sweeping indictment of the hospital's administration, urging removal of the Health Department's 10-year control, was made by its two top surgeons.

The pair, Dr. Brian Blades, also head of the George Washington University surgical staff, and Dr. Robert J. Coffey, also head of the surgical staff at Georgetown University, recommended that administration of Gallinger be placed under a separate agency—to be known as the hospital department. Simultaneously, they criticized a host of "deficiencies"—including space, equipment and even the 40-hour work week.

Ruhland Is "Astounded"

They said there is an immediate need for overhauling the administrative system, in many instances to keep patients from serious and unnecessary delays while awaiting surgery.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland said he was "astounded" at the criticism, which he termed "generalizations," and held that Gallinger is "doing a good job in spite of difficulties." "Administratively," he said, establishment of a separate hospital department would be a "step back."

He accused the two surgeons, who supervise most of the operations at Gallinger, of "mud slinging" and questioned their failure to "state their grievances directly to us." "I think, Dr. Ruhland added, "these good people have talked out of turn and with inadequate information."

Want New Resident System

The two surgeons, who emphasized that the quality of the medical servie has been sustained "despite" administrative inadequa- officer system now in operation be cies, suggested that the medical eliminated. They recommend that chief residents, to be supplied by the two schools, be substituted.

They also proposed a "free interchange" of certain tyes of indigent patients between Gallinger and the two university hospitals, claiming this would "save the city a good bit of moneys" and avoid much delay.

Of the 40-hour work week, they commented:

"That Civil Sertvice philosophy will never work in decent hospital care. Treating patients is a 24-hour job."

Browne P-TA Loses Battle On Transfers

Court Dismisses Complaint Against Board of Education

The Browne Parent - Teachers Association yesterday lost its battle to halt transfer of excess Negro pupils from Browne Junior High School to the Blow and Webb Elementary Schools when an injunction suit filed by the organization was thrown out of District Court.

Associate Justice Matthew F. McGuire, in dismissing the complaint, declared the plaintiffs failed to show abuse of either law or the discretionary powers of the District School Board which ordered the transfer to combat overcrowded conditions.

"The powers conferred upon the board (of education) of necessity are and must be general . . ." the just held.

The Browne P-TA had complained facilities offered at the Webb and Blow schools were inferior to those offered white former students of those schools at Eastern High School, to which they had been transferred to make way for the incoming Negro youngsters.

The group also asked that the school board be instructed to permit excess Browne students to enroll in a junior high school which would have "equal" facilities.

"Segregation in the schools has been in vogue in the District since 1864 and if there is to be any change, such change must come from Congress and not the courts," McGuire declare in a written opinion.

"The question raised here is the opinion and discretion of the Board of Education, and, as a consequence courts hesitate, in the absence of clear abuse of law or discretion, to substitute their judgment for that of the officers in whom the responsibility for the management of such affairs rests."

District Attorney Questions 6 Men in Haeberle Slaying

New York, March 2 (AP).—Six men were questioned at the district attorney's office today in the death of Harvey Haeberle, 35-year-old Navy employe, whose home was in Falls Church, Va. His body was found last Wednesday in his hotel room.

Louis A. Pagnueco, assistant district attorney in charge of the investigation, said he had "no comment." Others close to the inquiry, however, expressed confidence that they at last were on the trail of the killer or killers of the former Navy lieutenant.

Haeberle's hands and feet were tied in "Chinese torture knot" fashion and a tern sheet was twisted around his neck when his body, clad only in underclothes, was found by a hotel maid. His clothing and room had been ransacked.

Detectives expressed belief that at least two men had taken part in the robbery and slaying.

A project supervisor in a Navy photograph unit, Haeberle had come here from Washington, D. C., to confer with commercial film officials regarding Navy educational films.

4 in Family Burn to Death, 5 Injured

Four persons were burned to death and five others burned or injured at about 4 a. m. yesterday when fire swept a 2½-story frame house at 1411 Alabama ave. se.

The dead and injured were all members of the same family. Four others in the family escaped injury.

Killed were Mrs. Matilda Chisley, 83; her daughter, Mrs. Bernice Mills, 40, and two of Mrs. Mills' nine children, Evangeline, 14, and Barbara, 12.

In Casualty Hospital were Richard Mills, 44, husband of Mrs. Mills, whose condition is critical, and his daughter, Ernestine, 20, whose condition is serious.

Overheated Oil Stove

Brenda Mills, 5-month-old daughter of another daughter, Irene Mills, 21, was in critical condition at Gallinger Hospital. Also in Gallinger, but in good condition, was Marvin Mills, 7. Irene Mills was released from Gallinger after treatment.

Four of the Mills children—Lorraine, 18; Richard, jr., 16; Donald, 10, and Kynard, 9 months—were uninjured.

Firemen said the blaze was started by an overheated oil stove in the first-floor dining room. Lorraine Mills was first to discover the fire and awakened her father. The stove apparently fell over or exploded when he went to investigate.

The flames "spread very rapidly," firemen said. When Engine Company No. 25 reached the scene the house was a roaring inferno and the flames so intense firemen were unable to enter.

Although firemen had the blaze under control within 30 minutes it was some time before they could venture into the gutted structure to remove the bodies.

Father Burned in Rescue

Some members of the family escaped by leaping from windows, but the four who died were trapped in their bedrooms. Firemen said the bodies of Mrs. Chisley and Mrs. Mills were found in a room on the second floor and the bodies of Evangeline and Barbara in an attic room. All were burned beyond recognition but police identified the dead by checking relatives.

The father of the family, Mills, who operates a garage near his home, jumped from a second floor window to the top of a parked car but suffered critical burns when he attempted to rush back into the inferno to rescue members of his family.

The infant Brenda Mills suffered head injuries when she was thrown out of the burning building. Ernestine was injured when she leaped from a second floor window with her baby brother, Kynard, in her arms. Others injured in leaps were Irene and Marvin.

Fire Toll Now 18

The newest fire tragedy brought the District 1948 fire fatality toll to 18. Only 21 persons died in fires during all of 1947.

Late yesterday, the Rev. Mackey C. Carpentier, pastor of the Campbell A. M. E. Church, issued an appeal for contributions of furniture, clothing or money for the Mills family. The family lost everything in the fire, the Rev. Carpentier said.

Contributions can be made to the Church Service League, at 525 15th st. ne. The office is open from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. and the telephone number is Atlantic 5788. The family belongs to the Rev. Carpentier's congregation.

Also treated for burns yesterday was Clarence Adams, 36, of 2144 L st. nw. Adams was firing a furnace at the C. & C. Laundry, 2122 L st. nw., when he was burned by a flash flame from the furnace. He was admitted to Emergency Hospital with first and second degree burns to his back and right leg. His condition is not serious.

Murphy Wants Emerson Off Exam Board

Commissioners Asked To Oust Fire Captain, Appoint W. H. Ronan

Fire Chief Clement Murphy yesterday asked the Commissioners to remove Capt. Rupert C. Emerson as member of the Fire Department Board of Civil Service Examiners, a move which Emerson promptly labeled "retaliation."

Murphy previously stripped Emerson of his temporary rank as acting battalion chief following a fire February 24 at 1129 New Jersey ave. nw., where he said Emerson had done "one of the worst jobs" he'd ever seen.

Emerson was assigned as technical assistant to the prosecutor during Murphy's recent trial on inefficiency and demoralization charges. A special civilian trial board exonerated Murphy.

To succeed Emerson on the Civil Service board, Murphy asked the Commissioners to appoint Capt. William H. Ronan, acting executive officer of the Fire Department, who served as technical adviser to defense attorneys during Murphy's trial.

Murphy said the change was designed to give the board a member with "administrative and executive experience."

Murphy, who went to the fire after receiving several communications from Emerson's driver, said Emerson hadn't even entered the building although a woman and child were burned in the blaze.

Emerson, who returned to No. 6 Engine Co., temporarily at 210 M st. nw., said he wouldn't be surprised to be transferred soon under Murphy's "rapid rotation system."

Public Works Survey Is Voted

A survey of facilities, personnel and funds needed to assure "proper administration" of the Takoma Park department of public works will be conducted by the Takoma Park Community League.

The study was authorized Monday night, after about 50 members complained of failure to remove snow from the streets and of allegedly bad street conditions within the city limits. Findings will be reported to the Mayor and City Council.

The league also went on record as favoring municipal purchase of detachable snow plows which can be used with existing motorized equipment. Members also voted to ask city officials for a referendum in May on whether the Mayor and Town Council should receive compensation.

Slum Plans Spelled Out For 2 Areas In NE, SE

Present Residents In Barry Farms, Marshall Heights To Be Housed First

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

How slum clearance will work in two areas of the District was spelled out yesterday by the D. C. Redevelopment Land Agency.

The agency announced it has adopted a policy which would:

1. Give residents of Marshall Heights and Barry Farms first crack at any new housing built there under slum-clearance plans.

2. Allow them to keep the homes in which they live if they meet the standards set up by the agency, and if they are not in the way of subdivision developments such as streets.

3. Keep dislocation of residents of the two areas to a minimum by clearing Marshall Heights and Barry Farms, a section at a time, and building new housing for dislocated residents to use while their own areas are being reconstructed.

4. Safeguard their interests by prohibiting restrictive covenants as to race, creed or color and also by putting limitations on rent, cost of improvement and maintenance.

This broad statement of policy was outlined to representatives of civic associations of the two areas, as well as representatives of city-wide Negro groups, at a session held yesterday at the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The two areas head the list of Redevelopment Agency projects.

Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, commission chairman, who presided, explained that the policy followed the lines of NCPPC thinking, and had definitely been adopted by the Redevelopment Agency. The two groups are working together on planning and effectuating slum clearance.

Warning that no work on the two clearance projects—deemed the most urgen of the District's blighted areas—can be undertaken until Congress appropriates funds, General Grant said even if funds are allocated this year, preliminary work will extend well into 1950 and 1951.

Negroes Charged "Ghetto"

Slum clearance funds were rejected early this year by the House Appropriations Committee after Negro objections that the projects would establish a "Hitler-like ghetto" for them. Asked was $3,400,000 to start Land Agency operations and $61,500 for planning funds for the NCPPC.

Pointing to the immediate need for more dwellings in the area, General Grant assured residents that there will be no wholesale change in existing land use, such as clearing residential areas for parking lots or industry.

The plan calls for designing the areas on a community basis, with a normal balance of single-family homes, apartments, neighborhood shopping center, schools, playgrounds and other neighborhood facilities.

Marshall Heights is bounded by Bennings rd. ne., East Capitol st. and the District line. The Barry Farms development is bounded by Nichols ave. se., Fort Drive, Morris rd. and the St. Elizabeths Hospital grounds.

Police to Sell 7000 Items of Unclaimed Goods at Auction Today

By John London
Post Reporter

Some 7000 worldly reminders of countless shattered lives will go under the auctioneer's hammer today at 9 a. m.

The auction, under police auspices, will be at 469-477 C st. nw., a gloomy warehouse, haunted by memories of despair and sudden death.

Took Poison, Dropped Dead

About one white metal ring, the record simply states: "Deceased walked into Emergency Hospital, told them she had taken poison, and dropped dead. June 2, 1946."

The short, official history of the other ring, a wedding band: "Deceased had heart attack while driving an auto on Highway Bridge, May 25, 1946."

As in the case of all other items to be auctioned, no relatives appeared to claim the porperty.

The ownerless items will be sold in some 240 lots. One lot includes seven bookcases, four filing cabinets and about 500 law and income tax books—property of a long—successful income tax expert. He had a breakdown, was dispossessed for nonpayment of rent.

Property found abandoned on streets run the gamut of truck tires, corsets, an $1100 beaver coat, portable typewriter, jewelry and a book entitled "How to Lose Friends and Alienate People."

One interesting cache is a mountain of 635 cases of beer bottles. It took two police employes about 100 hours to empty the bottles—down the sink. The lot was seized in a vice squad raid.

The miscellany also includes black lace panties, a tooth brush (slightly used) and an electric fan.

Several shotguns will go under the hammer. But the estate of "John Doe," a man who died at Freedmen's Hospital unidentified, April 13, 1946, will not.

His estate: a pocket full of .22 caliber cartridges, one expended. Pistols, knives and the like are turned over to the pistol range or broken and tossed by police into the murky Potomac. Cash, recovered in raids or otherwise, is turned over to the District.

Area News in Brief

Girls, 17, 18, Face Car Theft Charges

An 18-year-old Arlington, Va., girl was arraigned yesterday on charges of joy-riding in a stolen car—one of the first ever filed against a young girl here.

Another girl, 17, has been turned over to juvenile authorities in connection with the case.

Municipal Court Judge Ellen K. Raedy postponed a trial for Shirley Mae Blue, 18, of 2411 N. 18th st., until next Tuesday and freed her on $500 bond.

She was arrested Monday when Arlington police stopped the automobile to question the occupants. The car, owned by Clifford H. Helgemo, 500 Pershing dr., Silver Spring, Md., was stolen from a gasoline statino at 1943 New York ave. ne., Sunday.

The police said two girls leaped from the car and fled, but they took the other two into custody. The name of the 17-year-old girl is being withheld because she is a juvenile.

Shirley Mae Blue told police she had been loaned the car by a boy friend and that she did not know it was stolen.

Truscott Heads Board

Assistant Police Superintendent Floyd A. Truscott yesterday was named by the District Commissioners to serve as chairman of the Police Department's Board of Civil Service. Truscott fills the vacancy left by retirement Monday of Inspector John H. Fowler.

Walter T. Storm, who was promoted to inspector February 26 and named to succeed Fowler as head of the Metropolitan Police training school, was designated a member of the board.

Must Remove Snow

Residents of Hyattsville, Md., have ample reason to hope the District area has had its quota of snow for the winter.

Under an ordinance adopted by the Town Council Monday night, responsibility for removing snow from sidewalks in front of homes and business establishments falls directly upon the occupants, with a 24-hour deadline provided. Fines ranging from $2 to $25 can be assessed on violators.

Libel suits totaling $400,000 were filed yesterday against Cab Driver James J. Brennan for his recent "expose" of the Washington taxi business in The Saturday Evening Post.

Also named with Brennan as defendants in the action was the Curtis Publishing Co.

His Memory Sharp

A policeman's sharp memory of a larceny defendant was as good as the written record in Municipal Court yesterday.

Detective Sergt. E. L. Dahlstrom told Judge Ellen K. Raedy he first remembered arresting the man for larceny back in 1933.

Charged with stealing five suits from his brother-in-law, Joseph Harrington, 41, of no fixed address, was given a $100 fine or 100 days in jail.

The Commissioners yesterday extended for one year, beginning next July 1, the District's program of free vaccination of dogs against rabies.

The action was recommended by Health Officer George C. Ruhland and Dr. R. R. Ashworth, director of the Bureau of Food Inspection, which handles the program. Dr. Ashworth said there were 1870 dogbite cases in the District last year and estimated there are 5000 unlicensed dogs in the city.

Pvt. George E. Causey, just leaving the station house after finishing a midnight to 8 a.m. tour of duty, captured her almost in front of the precinct. Police transferred her to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation.

First Report

6% of Goal Is Reached By Red Cross

The District Red Cross campaign, at its first report meeting yesterday, recorded 6.13 per cent of its $1,080,000 goal for 1948.

The intake for virtually the same period in last year's drive totaled 8.8 per cent, but the quota was smaller.

About 300 campaigners, attending a Dutch-treat luncheon in the Chamber of Commerce Bldg., learned that 13,319 gifts have been reported to date for total receipts of $66,237.60. The full drive was officially launched Sunday night.

The Government Unit, with 12,443 givers, stood at 6.43 per cent of its $494,000 goal, although its drive has been under way since February 18. A breakdown on other divisions reporting:

General Business, 7.45 per cent of its $315,100 quota; Residential, 7.73 per cent of its $84,000 quota; City, 8.38 per cent of its $54,000 quota.

Officials announced that several units have already gone over the top, including the Veterans Service Center, the Treasury Department's Bureau of Accounts and Treasury Secretary John W. Snyder's office.

Texans Honor Navy Dead From Corpus Christi

A group of Texans honored yesterday in Arlington National Cemetery the memory of Navy men who served at the Corpus Christi Naval Air Base before meeting death in combat.

In a drizzling rain, Pfc. Frank Calvin, a Marine now stationed at Corpus Christi, placed a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at the second annual Texas Independence Day ceremony in honor of the Corpus Christi base heroes.

Among those looking on as the wounded and decorated Marine laid the wreath were Assistant Secretary of the Navy Mark E. Andrews, Vice Admiral J. J. Clark, one-time commander of the Corpus Christi naval base; Senator O'Daniel and Representative Lyle, Texas Democrats, and Mr. and Mrs. William Coney of Corpus Christi.

Coney is a civilian employe at the Texas naval base and is credited with having conceived the idea of the annual commemorative ceremony.

Boy Chemist, Girl Geneticist Win Awards

To Andrew Steven Kende of Evanston, Ill., and Barbara Claire Wolff of Queens, N. Y., went the annual four-year $2400 Westinghouse Grand Science Scholarships.

Ten four-year $400 scholarships and 28 one-year scholarships of $100 each were awarded to other teen-age scientists from over the country in the closing session of the five-day Science Talent Institute at the Statler Hotel.

The 40 winners, eight girls and 32 boys, were chosen for their "outstanding scientific potential" in a talent search conducted by Science Service among 16,000 high school students.

Waymack Is Speaker

Awards were announced by Watson Davis, science service director, following a dinner. Principal speaker was W. W. Waymack, member of the Atomic Energy Commission. Nearly 1000 scientists, educators and parents and friends of the youthful scientists were present.

Fifteen-year-old Kende, youngest of the finalists, developed chemical compounds that would remove or cut down explosion hazards in chemical processes which produces silicones, sex hormones, and other products for commercial use.

Miss Wolff's scholarship-winning project was the production of phenocopies, or one-generation, non-hereditary changes in body shape and color of fruit flies. She accomplished this by treating the eggs with a dye and irradiating them with a common 100-watt household lamp.

No A-Power Seen Soon

Atomic Energy Commissioner Waymack declared that "immediate application" of atomic power for peacetime use "is not in prospect."

He predicted that, "when it does come," it will be in "rather large-scale, stationary power plants."

Waymack told the audience it will be a 10-year job before the first experimental plant of that kind can be in operation.

It will be "perhaps 20 or 30 years" before much use is being made of such plants, he added.

Most active use of atomic energy at present, he said, is in "tracers"—radioactive chemical elements whose progress can be traced wherever they go. The technique, Waymack said, is proving "especially useful" in medical and biological research.

Citizens Seek To Appear at Fare Hearing

The Arlington Civic Federation last night authorized its public utilities committee to intervene in an application by the A. B. & W. Transit Co. for a fare increase.

The bus line's petition comes before the Interstate Commerce Commission in a hearing April 19.

By its action, the Civic Federation will join the Arlington Public Utilites Commission in the requested fare hike proceedings.

Malcolm Miller, a member of the Federation's committee, said the bus company claims a loss of $30,000 during 1947 with an even geater proportional loss in January and February, 1948 and asked that the federation represent Arlington citizens in the case.

The federation indorsed "in principle" the formation of a citizens organization representing the Arlington, Fairfax, Alexandria, Falls Church and Prince William areas to implement regional planning.

Also approved was a request that the Arlington School Board appropriate funds for essential operating needs of schools which now raise such money on their own out of a proposed uniform milk price in the schools. The federation also asked that funds raised for schools by sale of scrap paper, gym equipment and milk be audited.

Wife of Panama's Envoy

Minnesota-Born Senora New Embassy Hostess

By Marie McNair

THERE'S something very appealing about Senora de Guardia, wife of the Panama Ambassador, newest member of Washington's Diplomatic Corps.

She's pretty enough to be a cover girl. She's slim, she moves with grace, and her hazel eyes are set wide apart on a serene brow.

MRS. McNAIR

Yesterday, at home in the embassy, Senora de Guardia had a fire burning on the hearth, a tea table set up before the low sofa. It was her first meeting with the ladies of the press since she arrived from Panama last week. And the news gals came away saying, "She's charming."

Married less than five years ago, Senora de Guardia met her husband in Washington, became his wife in Texas shortly after he had resigned as Ambassador to the United States, a post he had held from 1941 to 1943. They went back to Panama from the United States of America, and Ernesto Jaen Guardia served as chief engineer of the Public Roads Administration until this latest diplomatic assignment brought him back here.

Taught Kindergarten

AMERICAN born Senora de Guardia was Delores Hass, born in Minnesota where, as a young girl, she taught school. "Kindergarten," she said yesterday, "because I love children." She has one of her own now, 3½-year-old Ernesto jr., who escaped from his nurse yesterday when he heard the party downstairs, showed us the dolls which he brought with him from Panama. Ernie, as his mother calls him, is blond, and entertained his mother's guests with a series of exhibitions such as might be expected from one his size and sex.

Ernie is said to be the image of his father, so much so that when the sister of Senora de Vallarino, whose husband was Panama Ambassador here, first saw him she exclaimed "Why, it's Ernesto in English!"

Little Ernie is fluent in both Spanish and English, but usually speaks his mother's tongue when she can stop him long enough to get in a few words.

Likes Bridge, Music

SENORA de GUARDIA is a female Culbertson at bridge, and it's her husband's favorite game, too. She also likes music, particularly symphonic in arrangement, and plays the piano just enough to entertain herself. She once directed an orchestra back home and took up the study of 13 musical instruments at the time to learn the exact function of each.

"I like quiet colors," was her answer to a question on clothes, a subject which sooner or later crops up in every feminine gathering. "Black for winter and white for summer are my favorites, but occasionally I break out in color." Yesterday she swished about the drawing room in a full skirted black taffeta frock, ballerina length, and as bright accents she wore a wide gold cuff bracelet and a narrow snake chain.

Wanted: Perfect 'Jeeves' Who Can't Be Lured Away By High American Wages

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

CAN ANYONE spare a butler? He must be a veritable Jeeves, superskilled at his trade, prepared to handle any butlertorial emergency. After printing an item about Mrs. Nathan Wyeth's proposed training course for embassy social secretaries, we were deluged with inquiries. This led us to a minor investigation of embassy household mechanics.

We've turned up the startling fact that, more than social secretaries, the embassies' most crying need is for a wonderful butler. Many embassies, it seems, import butlers from home. If he's a whizz, after a brief span, he is lured away by higher wage offers.

Only too often the underhand lurer is an American guest, who literally bites the hand that feeds. Or the butler becomes so efficient that after a little careful nest-egging, he quits to set himself up in business at home.

The situation is so desperate one Ambassadress actually contemplates a special trip to Europe to bring back alive a perfect specimen of butler. All this is printed in a spirit of friendly cooperation in case some victim of inflation, forced to retrench, may want to place an honored servitor!

Art Movies

MARGARET MALLORY, who's come up with a new venture, is dropping into town this week. Elder daughter of the late shipping maestro and yachtsman, in wartime Washington she toiled appropriately in the Red Cross transportation division.

Now she's president of Falcon Films, Inc., a company recently formed to produce and distribute movies of contemporary and traditional art events. A new kind of visual education, the subjects are filmed in 16 mm. with both sound and color, and by wide distribution will reach thousands unable to visit museums or art galleries.

Right now, as its second Film Art Exhibition, Falcon Films is producing for spring release "French Tapestries Visit America" with a script by Meyric R. Rogers, the curator of decorative and industrial arts in Chicago's Art Institute.

Their first effort was the distribution of the American British Art Center's film "Henry Moore." Henry Moore is the famous artist and sculptor whose sculpture exhibition at New York's Museum of Modern Art created a minor sensation. The script and narration are done by James Johnson Sweeney, who recently published a book on Moore. The artist himself comments on his shelter drawings executed during the London blitz. Museum and gallery people all over the country are enthusiastic about the idea of a film art gallery and "Mal" certainly has success and much work ahead.

Gardening Hints

DOES YOUR backyard look down at the heel, a bit "seedy"? If so, be forehanded like Mrs. Curtis Munson and trot out to J. Morton Franklin in Falls Church. Mr. F is the original green thumb guy and is bursting with practical knowledge about all growing things.

A graduate of the University of Southern Oregon and Cornell, he was in charge of some 25,000 victory gardens during the war, is a valued horticultural consultant and turns out a gardening column. His "lecture" course falls under three headings, Indoor Plants, Outdoor Ornamentals and Food Gardens, and the talks are given in the Franklin greenhouse.

The amateur backyard gardener can run the gamut of the whole course or slip out to Falls Church for a single afternoon lecture. Mrs. Munson's friends, by the way, are waiting eagerly to see whether she fills her Georgetown garden with indoor, outdoor ornamentals or just plain food.

"Madame President"

JOHN FRANKLIN CARTER has authored a new Collier's serial which should amuse Washington. Slated to hit the stands next Wednesday, it is titled "Madame President." It's a story of how a woman could become President of these United States and what would happen when she did. Actually, John has turned the tale of "Lysistrata" inside out and given it modern embellishments.

The heroine is a lady and nice, and positively not Clare Boothe Luce. The other characters are equally fictitious, but during proofreading and editing resemblances were imagined and the author asked to change this or that.

Under the pseudonyn Jay Franklin, John Carter writes a political column widely circulated in the West. Partly because there's so much political news in the papers, he feels the political column's popularity is waning. In a collapsing world the public wants a dash of amusement, hence "Madame President," another witty Carter opus based on expert knowledge of politics.

The 'Right Look' for Spring

Accessories Create a Costume

By Peggy Preston

FASHION, like any pretty picture, needs finishing touches.

This year, with popular interest in clothes running at fever pitch, accessories are getting a rightful share of attention. For it is quite possible to achieve the "Right Look" this spring by adding a few carefully chosen accessories to last year's wardrobe.

PASTEL COLORED GLOVES . . . newest fashion favorite is chamois, a creamy yellow tone that is dramatic with black or navy . . . bright white shorties in either cotton or doeskin or a double woven nylon with a soft sueded finish.

For dressy afternoon or after-dark wear, weskit gloves, slashed to the wrist in a deep V, nice foil for a duo of jewelled clips . . . pert doeskin shorties with cuff-links.

SCARFS, as usual, are up to their tantalizing tricks. Spring florals, modern prints, exotic bold color combinations, as well as lovely solid colors in silks, rayons and sheers . . . In long lengths as well as variously sized squares . . . These wrap on waistlines, make back bustles, side bows, hip drapers, halter blouses, peplums and what have you. And, of course, you can be really old-fashioned and simply wear them around your neck.

IT'S A four-star year with collars, cuffs, capelets and cummerbunds, worn separately or teamed together with each other. Everything in neckwear reflects the feminine trend in fashions.

THE FICHU, an ultra feminine effect, is Paris inspired, and is prettiest in white organdy with, if you like, an edging of eyelet embroidery strung with black ribbon.

Match your collar and cuff set or fichu with a ruffled petticoat, add them to last season's black dress, and you create the effect of an entire new ensemble.

Ann Silver of New York, who is staging a complete fashion show of accessories at the Mayflower Hotel Saturday at 11:30, will have many additional hints for you. One thing she promises to tell is how to salvage our too-short slips.

AMERICAN buyers in Paris for the openings of the fashion houses are leaving their francs, only with the big-game designers, according to reports.

Houses that haven't much foreign following are complaining of a slump. But both Pierre Balmain and Christian Dior appear to be reaping the rewards of their much-publicized trips to this country last year.

Balmain says happily that his sales, so far, are double what they were last season. As for Dior—he claims business is so good he had to turn away nearly 60 orders from American buyers.

High prices don't deter the stateside folks who are said to be attending the openings in fantastic numbers. Although prices are up between 20 and 50 per cent over last season, eager Americans are continuing to give large orders.

Actual prices vary according to the amount of workmanship in a gown. Dior's starting price is around 38,000 francs ($125). Finishing prices indicate the sky is the limit.

LEASH twins—for you and your "best friend." Novel accessories are fun to wear with casual clothes, such as this slack suit. The matching leash and belt are effective in bright, contrasting colors. Gloves are pebble-stitched beige cotton shorties

FABRIC gloves are spring favorites. These double woven cotton gloves are diametrically slashed for a flared gauntlet effect to balance tapering suit sleeves. The diagonal line is further accentuated by a row of crystal buttons, reflecting the light of a necklace of the same beads. From the collection of accessory fashions to be presented by the Hecht Co., at the Accessometer Show, Saturday, March 6, in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom

Handbag For Spring

For your petticoat dress or hat, stylists recommend an elongated "clutch" bag. The one below, of navy blue fallie, has a tiny ruffle of its own around the "hem" and an adjustable strap which can be lengthened or shortened at will.

Less Appetite, More Exercise Nips in Waist

By Ida Jean Kain

The only calories that go to waist are the extra ones. Instead of letting the beltline out to accommodate the extras, clamp down on calories for three days—maybe four. That's all you have to do to get the upper hand on appetite—no fooling.

Doubtful? Try it. Start with dinner tonight. Get up from the table just short of full. Sure, you could eat a little more. More what? Well, hot biscuits with jelly, another little helping of mashed potatoes—or a big helping of dessert. Nix. That's old debbil appetite playing you false. Now if it's another helping of string beans you crave or more salad or even another slice of lean meat—budget willing—help yourself. Have a good dinner, but don't keep on eating until you're stuffed.

You can't depend on appetite to give a satiety signal; it gets muffled when buried deep in fat. And overeating is so pleasantly habit-forming! But if you will get away from the table and get your mind off food, you'll lose your appetite. Granted it takes practice, but the more you do it, the easier it is. Will power, like muscle, gets stronger with exercise.

Which brings us to the business of putting some tone in the muscles that bound the waist—that helps shrink appetite, too. Tomorrow morning use some of that newly developed will power to carry you through a couple of easy exercises.

There's a kind of knack to waist-slimmers. For example, in waist-twisting, the action will take place mainly in the hip joints unless movement there is prevented. To hold the hips in line, lean against a table, anchor the hips, then twist at the waist, like this:

Position: Standing against a desk, or table, back of hips pressed solidly against the furniture, arms out at sides shoulder level.

Movement: Twist slowly at the waist until you are facing the side. With hips held still, all the twist is smack at the midriff. Twist to the opposite side. Three times in each direction will be enough. That's no two-finger exercise! It doesn't help any to make the waist muscles sore. Keep them supple by doing, but not overdoing.

Finish with a stretch-bend. Arms up in the air, fingers clasped, pull slim through the middle, s-t-r-e-t-c-h. Holding the pull, bend directly sideward, but keep the hips in line. If you let the hips poke out to the side you might as well skip it—the streamlining effect is lost. Do this exercise slowly and easily for six counts. Relax.

Check Baby's Diet to Help Cure Insomnia

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Mrs. S. B. is sure her boy is a healthy, vigorous 17-month-old child and normal in every way. "But he has a habit that is driving us crazy," she writes. "Practically on the stroke of midnight he wakens, cries loudly and demandingly. We change him, make him comfortable and leave him. But it is no use. He keeps crying for about four hours.

"He is a splendid eater, has a well-rounded diet of cereals, orange juice, vegetables, fruits, eggs and of course Vitamin D. He likes milk and drinks 2 to 3 cups at a meal.

"He has one short nap from 1 to 2:30 p. m. but I waken him so he will sleep better at night. Up until this habit started a few months ago he slept splendidly all night. I put him to bed with the other children about 7:15 to 7:30 but it makes no difference. I hope I have given you a clear enough picture so you can see what is wrong."

I am never satisfied, am I? I want to know HOW much of each of these desirable foods. I can't imagine that he gets enough or he would not drink so much milk with his meals. One cup of milk ought to suffice if he is well-filled with the solid foods.

It might be better to put him to bed a half-hour earlier at noon (start his noon meal at 11:30) and then he could sleep his nap out without interruption.

Check over other suggestions for poor sleeping and see if any of them give you a hint as to factors you could improve. Meanwhile, when he wakens in the night leave the light on, give him toys and hope that he will play and not cry until he falls asleep.

This isn't ideal but it is better than listening to a crying baby until such time as an increased diet and attention to other temporary irritants have ended the habit. As a suggestion allergies might cause night wakefulness. Has he ever had a previous history of these? Check that, too.

Brunette Coloring Is Darker

If you are a brunette, here's an observation you'd better think over, and see if it happens to concern you and the makeup shades you are using.

According to makeup experts complexions of brunettes are, on the average, a full shade darker than they were a decade ago. A widespread increase in outdoor activity, with its consequent exposure to the skin darkening effects of sun and wind is responsible for this general deepening of brunette skin tints.

So if you are a brunette, do a double check on your complexion shade, and see if the makeup tints which you may have selected correctly enough some years ago are still the correct ones today.

Homemaking Hints

A soiled duster leaves more dirt than it takes away.

When pressing woolens and using a damp rag be sure to wring the rag out of warm water, not cold. Cold water will only cool the iron more quickly and make a longer job of it.

Light scratches on mahogany or walnut furniture can be made practically invisible by carefully applying tincture of iodine. When dry, rub down well with polish on a dry, soft cloth.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Divorcee With Two Children Marries Widower Who Takes Her to Live With His Father, Also A Widower, Whose Endless Nagging Frays Nerves

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was a divorcee with two children, a son now 10 and a daughter 8 years of age, when I married again a short time ago. My new husband was a widower whom I have known since childhood.

His first wife was a fine woman and they were very devoted. She died about a year after my divorce. Then gradually our courtship got under way and eventually we were married.

We love each other dearly. He thinks I am perfect in every way and I think the same of him. My problem is his father. We live in his father's house and his father lives with us, although Grant (my husband) pays all the bills, after spending handsomely to have the house redecorated for us.

Mr. Smith (I'll call the father) oversees my every move and is endlessly critical of my son. Whatever I do, he is always there telling me how his wife or Grant's first wife did, challenging my use of things previously "saved" for special occasions, etc.; and this I could stand, but not his nagging of my son Ned.

Boy Especially Is Being Warped

NED failed his exams last term (as I did once in my youth) and Mr. Smith won't let him forget it for a minute. He twits about it, tells outsiders how dumb Ned is (and he isn't dumb), and is always after him with "Do this" and "Don't do that." Ned must put on bedroom slippers the minute he enters the house, for example.

I haven't complained to my husband about these things, but at times I have put in a word to Mr. Smith on Ned's behalf, as I just can't sit and take the stricken look on the boy's face when he heckles him. The children never answer back; I taught them that.

It doesn't bother us if my husband or his father corrects them, as I told the children when I married that they must mind the men and not talk back, and they are good about that. But Ned is growing sullen and getting an inferiority complex. He keeps saying "I'm just dumb, plain dumb," and he almost cries when he says it, and he was never a weepy child.

The strain is affecting even my good nature, and I am good natured. I don't want to hurt my husband but something must be done or the boy is going to be hurt. He is going to hate his new home, his new grandpa and everything else if the problem isn't worked out. Please tell me what to do. V. S.

Father Resents New Arrangement

DEAR V. S.: Mr. Smith's behavior signifies that he greatly resents Grant's new marriage, balefully refuses to accept it as a permanent arrangements and is striking through Ned, as well as directly, to get your goat, with the covert aim of driving you out.

Grant has no children, I gather, which probably means that Papa was the baby of the family—so treated by the womenfolk heretofore—until you and your brood moved in.

Now he is jostled by two developments. First, by your status as Grant's sweetheart wife, which sets him apart, a fifth-wheel person in the picture, a radical change from his previous rank in the family-grouping around Grant's esteemed first wife, I dare say.

Doubtless she had settled in to a somewhat impersonal role of benevolent homemaker to Grant and Papa, trying to minister impartially to each, thus keeping Papa's crankiness appeased and compelling Grant's respectful dependency, though at considerable expense to conjugal ardor over the years.

Fights Woman On Two Counts

THIS is implied by Gran't feeling, matched by yours, that until now he never knew what love could be,—a sentiment I was obliged to delete in condensing your letter.

Thus I take it that Papa's nose is out of joint on this score. But the second aspect of the new regime he can't abide, and would war against even if you were a dead-ringer for the first Mrs. Grant, is your children's live-in presence, which automatically shatters the old order of things, brings unprecedented wear-and-tear on his belongings and (from his viewpoint) generally introduces bedlam to his premises, where in recent decades he was the unrivaled chief concern of adult care-takers.

In my opinion, the situation is serious and indeed may be hopeless of solution within the framework of marriage to Grant, if the father is a fixture in his home life. Ned's mental health is being damaged by the father's spitework; and it is your duty to be bold in changing that trend, letting the chips fall where they may.

Grant is the pivotal person in the picture, so put the problem up to him, with full details. He owes you firm sympathetic championship in guarding the children's welfare against the father's malice; but it remains to be seen whether he has stature sufficient to meet the test. If he hasn't, the marriage is a failure right now. M. H.

Your Questions On Homemaking

What is the best method to use in cleaning a large plush toy with a music box inside? D. G.

To clean plush toys, shampoo them with a soap jelly. To make the jelly, dissolve 1 cup mild soap flakes or chips in 2 cups warm water. Allow to cool and jell. Now, whip the jellied soap with the egg beater to form heavy suds. Apply the suds to the toy with a cloth or brush, working over a small area at a time. When suds become soiled, wipe away, using a blunt-edged knife, and apply more suds, working in a circular motion until area is thoroughly clean. When area is clean, remove suds with blunt knife and sponge with clean water until thoroughly rinsed. Work quickly so the stuffing of the toy does not become wet. Continue in this manner until toy is cleaned all over. Hang in airy place so it will dry as quickly as possible.

Recently I purchased a solid cherry bedroom suite which had been polished with a hard wax similar to that used on automobiles. How can I remove this wax in order to use furniture polish on the pieces? G. M. S.

The accumulation of wax can be removed by wiping the furniture with a soft cloth dampened with turpentine. As the cloth becomes soiled, turn the cloth to a fresh area and add more turpentine.

Is it safe to wash a white crepe blouse with hand-painted flowers on it, and a few sequins? If so, how? E. M. F.

Because of the danger of the sequins causing rust spots on the crepe when wet, I would suggest you send it to a reliable dry cleaner for cleaning.

How can I get the glass top off a coffee table, when one side is stuck—and fast? I have split one corner of the table trying to pry it up with a knife. Something must have spilled (a drink perhaps) on the glass top and seeped underneath, as the glass always came off before. H. O.

Try this to remove the glass: Pour a little turpentine over the area where the glass is stuck and allow it to stand several hours to soak under the glass as the drink did. If this doesn't loosen the glass so it can be lifted off, repeat, always allowing several hours to elapse before attempting to remove the glass. If this doesn't loosen the glass so that it can be lifted off, I would suggest you take the table to a furniture repairman who is equipped to remove the wood frame from the glass and then remove the glass.

I have several new very large men's suits and an overcoat which are of no use to my husband and I would like to have suits made for myself from them. Can you tell me if there is any place in Washington that does this sort of altering, and if so, approximately how much this would cost? F. S. P.

Under "Dressmakers" in the yellow pages of the telephone book you will see dressmakers listed who make a specialty of remodeling clothes and would be able to do the sort of job you wish done.

It is very difficult to say how much such a piece of work would cost, because the price would vary with the area in which the dressmaker worked and how much altering had to be done on the suit. I have been told that prices for such work would be approximately $25 and up.

Montgomery Asked to Set Up Electrician Licensing Board

Charging present electrical inspections are "grosly inadequate," a graup of county electrical contractors yesterday asked Montgomery County commissioners to set up an examining board to license electricians.

Spokesman for the Association of Electrical Contractors, with about 60 members, said that in many cases wiring is covered up by builders before an inspector sees it.

The trouble, they said, lies with the "inadequate inspetcion staff of the Park and Planning Commission.

Attorney Walter E. Moorman of Bethesda, who spoke for the delegation of 12 electrical contractors, urged enactment of an ordinance which would set up a board of examiners that would screen all county electricians and license those who are qualified.

Such an ordinance, Moorman said, should also provide for appointment of an electrical inspector with a sufficient number of deputy inspectors.

Submitting a draft of the ordinance, Moorman said it would set up a standard backed by possible fine or imprisonment.

He also suggested that electrical contractors be compelled to post a $2000 bond which would be forfeited if the work was not performed satisfactorily.

The licensing procedure, Moorman pointed out, would prevent "inexperienced and unqualified" electricians from doing "slipshod" work. A nominal license fee shroud be required of all master electricians, journeyman and apprentice electricians as well as the contractors, he said.

The commissioners said they would study the plan.

Prince Georges Won't Pay One Cent for Roadway Rights

Millions for road building but not one cent for rights of way was the edict issued yesterday by the Prince Georges County Commissioners.

The county's million-dollar road building program has bogged down from the weather and from right-of-way trouble. County Engineer Arthur W. Tayman told the commissioners a handful of property owners is holding up work on four important projects.

Tayman asked if the commissioners would institute condemnation proceedings to clear the way for the road work. The board replied it is willing to spend the money to construct the roads but is not willing to pay for rights of way either outright or through condemnation. No bids for road jobs will be asked until the entire right of way has been obtained, the commissioners decided.

"It's up to the citizens who want the roads to put the pressure on the recalcitrant property owners and obtain the rights of way," President William A. Carson declared. "It is an historic policy of this board that rights of way should be donated."

The commissioners ordered improvement of the road connection of Highland ave. in the Pinecrest subdivision with Eastern ave. abandoned after Tayman reported property holders refused to donate necessary land for the improvement. Four other connections contained in the same contract will be improved, they ordered.

Right-of-way trouble also is holding up construction of the Riverdale rd.-Finn's lane stretch from Edmonston rd. to Defense Highway. Work on the road has been started from the Defense Highway end and the commissioners decreed the road will have to be narrowed past several properties where the owners will not donate land. Other road projects held up by rights of way include Whitfield rd. from Defense Highway at Lanham to Ardwick, and Swann rd. from the Suitland-Silver Hill rd. to Mayhew rd., neither of which is under contract.

The board disapproved a tentative $75,000 budget for recreation but agreed to provide $23,000 for playgrounds, the same as last year.

Hacker Bound On Cab Permit Fraud Charge

A Washington cab driver was freed on bond yesterday on charges he bilked three men of $114.50 with a promise to get them taxi driver permits.

Legally, the permits would have cost the three from $7 to $9 each.

The defendant, who claims he "was framed," is Walter S. Everett, 43, of 1426 12th st. nw. His case was continued until March 10 by Municipal Court Judge Ellen K. Raedy on $500 bond. He was charged with larceny after trust.

Everett was arrested on a warrant based on the complaint of the three men who said they paid him varying amounts after he promised he could get permits for them. The three had appeared to retake the exams after flunking them the first time.

They told Hack Inspector Lawrence D. Johnson, who had them tell it again to the United States Attorney's office, which issued the warrant.

They were: Clarence A. Walker, 225 Lowrie pl. ne., who said he paid Everett $49.50; Levi Colbert, 628 Acker st. ne., $30, and Guy S. Beverly, 608 K st. se., who said he paid $35.

'Hunger Strike' Of 5 Alleged Alien Reds Now Reality

New York, March 2 (U.P.).—The hunger strike of five alleged alien Communists in Ellis Island became genuine today.

Immigration officials said the men had disposed of food brought to them by friends and now were actually fasting.

They are being held pending deportation hearings and are protesting the Government's refusal to grant bail.

Four of the men began a hunger strike at breakfast yesterday, but the Immigration officials termed it a fake. They said the men were "well stocked up" with gifts of food.

Today Irving Potash, who was arrested yesterday for deportation as an alien Communist, refused with the others to eat lunch.

The other four men are Gerhart Eisler, alleged No. 1 Communist in the United States; Charles A. Boyle, regional director of the Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers (CIO); John Williamson, Communist Party labor secretary, and Ferdinand C. Smith, secretary of the National Maritime Union (CIO).

Salonika Raid Gives Fears for Attack on Athens

Athens, March 2 (U.P.).—Heavy guerilla artillery attacks on two north Greek towns yesterday and a five-mast raid on the great northeastern port of Salonika have increased fears that Athens itself may be threatened, Greek officials said today.

Athens press reports said the guerillas hammered the towns of Naoussa and Soufli with mountain artillery. Thirteen persons were reported killed by 90 shells hurled into the center of town. There was no report of casualties from Soufli, hit by 130 projectiles.

Five armed guerillas came to Salonika in small boats yesterday, and began shooting up the town, according to reports from the high command. Two of the rebels were killed, one wounded and two escaped after a battle in which police brought up tanks to combat their enemies.

Two Killed as Plane Crashes Into House

Livermore, Calif., March 2 (AP).—A private plane crashed into a house near here early today killing its two occupants. A family of three escaped injury, although the bedroom in which they were sleeping was demolished. The plane bounced on across a road, exploded and burned.

Fiancee Wins Commutation For Murderer

Nashville, Tenn., March 2 (U.P.).—A 20-year-old girl who pleaded for permission to marry a killer before he went to the electric chair saved her sweetheart's life today. But she will not be permitted to share it with him.

Budzynski

Gov. Jim McCord commuted the death sentence of Daniel Budzynski, 19, to 99 years imprisonment. But he sternly disapproved a marriage between the youthful felon and Jeane Lucas, a Pittsburgh Sunday School teacher.

Miss Lucas, undismayed, said she was more eager than ever to marry Budzynski, although under Tennessee laws she could never live with him or be able to divorce him.

"There will still be a wedding," she said.

Death Planned Tomorrow

Budzynski was to have died in the electric chair at dawn Thursday with Richard Reilly, triggerman in a holdup in which a Beale st. merchant in Memphis was killed in 1946. Reilly still faces the chair, but Governor McCord is considering his case.

Miss Lucas showed up in Nashville yesterday accompanied by Henrietta Budzynski, Dan's sister. They borrowed $200 from a Pittsburgh grocer to come here and make a desperate plea for Budzynski's life or, failing that, obtain permission for his fiancee to marry him before he went to the chair.

The young woman's appeal met with a number of complications. She is a Methodist and Budzynski is a Catholic. Also a three-day waiting period is required in Tennessee after a marriage license is obtained.

Church Workers Intervene

McCord said she had not petitioned him for permission to marry the youth. But her appeal through other channels aroused much interest.

The Most Rev. William L. Adrian, bishop of the Catholic diocese, and other Catholic leaders asked that the death sentence be commuted. A delegation of Methodist church workers conferred with the Governor this morning.

McCord then talked with Budzynski's attorney, and announced the commutation.

Chesapeake Bay Bridge Bill Awarded

Maryland's long-sought bridging of Chesapeake Bay was given a step toward reality by congressional action here yesterday.

The Senate Public Works Committee reported out favorably a bill authorizing Maryland to construct bridges or tunnels or combinations of the two across the Chesapeake and also across the Patapsco River at Baltimore.

The new bill, S-2201, is a revised version of Senate Bill 1553 previously submitted by Senators Millard E. Tydings and Herbert R. O'Conor (Dems., Md.) for Federal authority for the projects.

Under the revised bill, Maryland is given authority to construct, maintain and operate the two new projects, grouping them for financing purposes with present toll bridges over the Susquehanna and Potomac Rivers. Costs would be financed by tolls, with an amortization limit of 40 years.

Location of the Chesapeake Bay project would be from Sandy Point to the Eastern Shore at a point approximately opposite Kent Island. The Patapsco River project would tunnel the river at a point near the mouth of the North West Branch to a point near Fairfield.

A bill authorizing similar authority was passed by Congress in 1938 under which the State built the river bridges at Havre de Grace and Morgantown. The same act authorized the Chesapeake and Patapsco projects but that authority was permitted to lapse, requiring new legislation.

Committee members said the approved bill reported out yesterday was written after a series of conferences and represented "complete agreement" of State and Federal offices involved. These include the State, Army Engineers, the Federal Works Agency and the Public Roads Administration.

Va. Bank Cashier Faces Grand Larceny Charge

Hampton, Va., March 2 (AP).—C. Baxter Markham, cashier of the Bank of Phoebus, was at liberty under $5000 bond today, charged with grand larceny of bank funds missing since last Tuesday.

The 42-year-old man surrendered to police after he had been

A report that Federal bank examiners—on the day Markham disappeared—uncovered a shortage of between $15,000 and $20,000 in his accounts was verified by H. B. Wilson, president of the bank.

Virginia Cancer Drive Has $190,000 Goal

Fredericksburg, Va., March 2 (AP).—Virginians will be asked to give $190,000 this year for the fight against cancer in the State and Nation, Dr. L. H. Peterson, managing director of the Virginia Division of the American Cancer Society, told an all-day regional cancer institute meeting here today.

The goal is the largest ever asked of the people of the State, Dr. Peterson said. Representatives from 25 northern Virginia counties participated in the meeting.

Early Ruling On Sewer District Seen

Judge Paul Brown of Fairfax County Circuit Court said last night he would issue a decision "within the next few days" on proposed creation of a new sanitary district in the McLean section of the county.

He took the matter under advisement at the conclusion of a public hearing which continued until nearly 9 p. m., and produced a welter of conflicting testimony on the need for urban sewage and water facilities in the seven-square-mile area.

Proponents of the new district, which would be designated as Fairfax County Sanitary District No. 3, contended that a rapidly developing urban trend in the area has necessitated immediate installation of water and sewer facilities which could be provided only through creation of a sanitary district.

Their testimony was countered by arguments that the area is not sufficiently well populated to justify the expense of installing urban-type water and sewer networks.

Among spokesmen for proponents was G. Hubard Massey, consulting engineer, employed to prepare plans for a citizens' committee which petitioned the court for creation of the new district. He said the facilities which would be provided were needed to eliminate a growing health menace and predicted that revenues from water and sewage would make the program "self-liquidating" in 40 years.

Massey's testimony was contradicted by R. Stuart Royer, a consulting engineer from Richmond, who expressed skepticism of the present building boom in the area, and contended that the concentration of housing in the area at this time does not justify the program.

In the event the court orders creation of the new district, residents of the area will be asked to vote in a public referendum on a proposed $1,700,000 bond issue to finance the sanitary improvements.

Moonshiner Chase Takes Second Life

Wytheville, Va., March 2 (AP).—Weaver H. Hogan, a North Carolina highway patrolman died in Wytheville Hospital today — the second fatality resulting from a chase after suspected moonshine runners early yesterday.

Charles B. Taylor, 43, police chief of Sparta, N. C., died yesterday en route to a hospital.

Hagerstown C. of C. To Check on Dentists

Hagerstown, Md., March 2 (AP).—J. Alan Clopper, president of the local Chamber of Commerce, said today the chamber would make an investigation of the dentistry situation here.

He said patients complain they have to wait three months for an appointment.

The dentists contend there is one for every 2500 residents—the same as the average for the country, Clopper said.

Ex-Governor Peery 'A Little Better'

Richlands, Va., March 2 (AP).—Former Gov. George C. Peery's condition was reported a "little better" today at Mattie Williams Hospital here.

His physician, Dr. J. P. Williams, said the 74-year-old former chief executive of Virginia has been "pretty sick for two weeks." Peery was admitted to the hospital February 20.

Frederick to Survey Veteran Housing Needs

Similar surveys are under way at Cumberland, Oakland and Hagerstown so the State will be in a position to obtain any Federal appropriations made for veterans' housing.

THAT DOES IT FOR TODAY, MISS JAXON!--AND MAY THAT IF ALL MODELS WERE EASY TO WORK WITH AS YOU, THE ULCER WOULD BECOME EXTINCT!
WE MUS... SWEET...
THOSE WORDS PHONIC COULDN'T SOUND
HI, JOHNNY BOY! I'M IN! I'M A SUCCESS! THAT ISN'T DANDRUFF ON MY SHOULDERS!--IT'S STARDUST!
SORRY TO SET YOU DOWN, JUNIOR! BUT NO MODEL HAS ARRIVED TILL SHE HAS HER NAME IN A BROADWAY COLUMN, HER FACE IN A CIGARETTE AD AND HER PHONE NUMBER IN TURK STEELE'S LITTLE RED BOOK!
I'LL GO FOR THE PLUG AND THE PICTURE--BUT WHO IS TURK STEELE!
WHO IS TURK---? YOU HAVE BEEN OUT OF TOWN A LONG TIME, BABE!

THE DRUG MAKES THE YANKEE WOMAN DOCTOR AND HER PILOT APPEAR VERY DRUNK!
OUR AGENTS AMONG THE NATIVES ARE TALKING UP THE 'DISGRACEFUL' PERFORMANCE!
GOTTA GET OFFA STREET
THROW THEM BACK INTO THE SQUARE - WHERE ALL MAY OBSERVE THEIR SHAME!
YES! ONLY YANKEES WOULD SEND A STUPID WOMAN TO DOCTOR OUR PEOPLE!
SHALL WE ALLOW THE PEOPLE TO STONE THEM TO DEATH?
NOT YET! I SHOULD HAVE A LITTLE FUN FROM THIS AFTER. ALL MY WORK! BRING THE WOMAN TO ME!

WHAT A FIGHT... WOW... HEAR THAT CROWD ROARING.....
KILL 'IM, CHU-CHU... MOIDER 'IM!
OH JOEY BOY... WATCH YERSELF...
AND ROUND TWO ENDS WITH EVEN THE FANS OUT OF BREATH.
I GOTTA TINK FAST NOW...

BARNABY

Look, Barnaby! The label I designed fits on the bottle. It can be read now without a mirror . . . Shrdlu fixed it!
Gosh.
With my unfailing executive's instinct, I was able to put an unerring finger on the man for the job! Shrdlu! Shrdlu, with all his mysterious demoniacal lore, his strange black arts—
Oh, nuts, O'Malley.
I merely took your design to a photo-engraving shop, reduced it, flopped the negative for a reverse, transferred it to zinc, smeared on dragon's blood as I etched it, and proved it up.
Imagine, m'boy. Doing all that and making it sound so simple!
And killing a dragon, too!

W-WHAT'S THE MATTER, VERA? -Y-YOU'RE AS WHITE AS A GHOST!
THAT WATER, PHIL! -THAT YOU HAD THE OLD BELL HOP BRING UP TO MRS. CASEY! IT'S DONE JUST WHAT HE SAID IT WOULD DO!

SO MUCH SO THAT I'M FRIGHTENED, PHIL! SHE WANTS TO APOLOGIZE TO YOU NOW! I REALLY THINK I SHOULD CALL A DOCTOR!
NO, NO, VERA! SHE'LL BE OKAY! THAT OLD BELL HOP SAID IT NEVER HURT ANYBODY! OH, BOY! THIS IS RICH!
PHIL- YOU DON'T SEEM TO REALIZE HOW SERIOUS THIS MAY BE! I WANT YOU TO COME RIGHT UP TO HER ROOM WITH ME-AND SEE FOR YOURSELF!
I-I DON'T KNOW WHY I ACTED LIKE I DID, PHIL! M-MY NERVES MUST HAVE BEEN ON EDGE!
I UNDERSTAND, MRS. CASEY! NOW WE'RE GOING TO FORGET ALL ABOUT IT!

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

He Knew It Had Something to Do With Early Settlers

He's a Big Man back in his home town. The minute he and his missus hit Washington they dropped in to see his old pal, the Senator. But the Senator was out of town for the day.

The Big Man's face mirrored his disappointment. "Sure looked forward to seeing him again. We used to be very good friends in the old days."

"Perhaps he'll get back tonight in time to call you," suggested the Senator's secretary. "Where are you staying?"

"We're staying at the 'Pilgrim'."

The secretary dutifully wrote down "the Pilgrim" and then frowned thoughtfully at the notation. "I don't believe I've ever heard of a hotel called 'the Pilgrim.' Where is it?"

"Why, it's that big place over there on the wide street that's a few blocks from the White House. You know, the . . . "

"Dear," murmured the Big Man's wife apologetically, "are you sure it's the 'Pilgrim' and not the 'Mayflower'?"

ADD SIGNS

Al Paul of 1741 Trinidad ave. ne. says that a Brooklyn exterminator advertises:

"Our business is best when it's lousy."

"Speaking of signs," says Mrs. Henrietta Delozier of Leonardtown, Md., "maybe you can explain these two.

"In Leonardtown, we have a sign which says that it's six miles to Hollywood. But when you get to Hollywood, the sign says it's five miles to Leonardtown."

That does seem a bit strange, Mrs. Delozier. Maybe Leonardtown and Hollywood are like Christmas and New Years.

It's a week from Christmas to New Years—but it's 51 weeks from New Years to Christmas.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

By the time good movies get to neighborhood theaters, they're often spoiled for me because they've been spliced so many times the action and dialogue are jumpy. Wonder what makes all that splicing necessary?

MISCELLANY

Sign in the window of the Investment Pharmacy, 15th and K sts. nw.: "Your Income Tax, $1." Ah, would that it were so . . . Another nearby sign on K st. also catches my fancy—"Reading Lamps for People Who Wear Bifocals." Wonder what that's all about . . . Alice Sommer of 630 Chestnut ave., Falls Church, Va., was delighted when hubby and she finally moved from an apartment to a home of their own. "Always did want to have a bird house in the yard," she confided. They put up a wren house, which the wrens studiously avoided for almost a year. So the opening was enlarged, to accommodate larger birds, and now it finally has a tenant—a flying squirrel

. . . The president of the Ladies of Charity of St. Thomas the Apostle Catholic Church is trying to find a sewing machine for a crippled girl who can (with that help) earn a living as a seamstress. Address Mrs. James Salkeld, 3017 Courtland pl. nw., who is handling the case . . . Two or three times in the past readers have rapped my knuckles for printing items "which appeared ages ago" in various magazines. This month's Reader's Digest uses the "gentlemen be-fur blondes" crack which appeared here several months ago—but credits it to somebody else. And it also pays admiring tribute to the line, "The less you bet, the more you lose when you win," which is credited to Walter Winchell. Winchell, indeed! That one had whiskers when Walter Haight's grandfather was an apprentice boy.

HOW MANY IN A PAIR?

Marie L. Waters of 810 S. 22d st., Arlington, Va., infers that I know something about the rules of grammar. She writes:

"In the Peggy Lee recording of 'Golden Earrings' Peggy murmurs: '. . . and let this pair of golden earrings cast their spell tonight.' Shouldn't a pair cast its spell, rather than 'their' spell?"

Webster says "pair" is singular and I'm therefore inclined to agree with Marie that the singer should say ". . . let this pair of golden earrings cast its spell . . ."

Golly, the things I learn trying to answer these questions!

GIVE-AWAYS

CALLING ALL CARS

The boys on the city desk are a sophisticated lot. They don't surprise very easily.

But you should have seen the arched eyebrows the other day when the police radio announced:

"Be on the lookout for a truck and trailer. White truck, Black trailer, both painted green."

Strange as it sounds, I'm told that there's a perfectly logical explanation.

The truck was manufactured by the White Motor Co., the Black people made the trailer and (see how simple it is) both were painted green.

Leonard Lyons . . .

(Leonard Lyons' guest columnist today is Salvador Dali.)

WELL, Leonard Lyons is away on a trip, and has asked me to be a guest columnist while he's gone. I accept because it is a true, Dalinian performance to manage, without moving from my quiet and sunny studio in Monterrey, to put myself in contact with the personalities who frequent El Morocco or the Stork Club and whom Lyons causes to glitter in the magic night of New York.

The famous French designer, Christian Dior, promoter of the New Look and responsible for the hourglass corset, long skirts, etc., flew down from San Francisco to see me at my studio in Monterrey. Dior was one of the first people in Paris to concern himself with the sale of my "unsellable" surrealist paintings. He even sold to an enormously wealthy shoe manufacturer a painting showing a wet nurse sitting absent mindedly on a beach, balancing on her head, with the same absent mindedness, a feminine shoe from which emerged a grilled lamb chop. Meeting again after so many years, we kissed each other affectionately, and then, looking at him with surprise, I exclaimed, "Well, tell me how things have been going with you." And Dior answered, "The same as with you—great success!"

One of the best friends I have in America is Col. Jack Warner. I lived at his sumptuous house in Beverly Hills for several months, but since at that time I couldn't speak a word of English, and he couldn't speak a word of French, our conversations were limited to a single phrase, which had the advantage of putting us in complete agreement. This phrase was the following: "Petite marmite!" Every time that this same idea mysteriously put our two souls in communication, one or the other of us, or frequently both at the same time, would pronounce the magic phrase "Petite marmite" and sometimes one of us would emphasize the word "petite" to show that we had understood . . . On moonlight nights we used to go together to visit a gigantic spider which we had discovered in the vegetable garden and which looked like a terrific blond harpist. From time to time I get a telegram which says "Spider," and I wire right back, "Petite marmite!" Then I usually get another wire from Jack Warner with just the word "petite." And thus our friendship goes on, forever unalterable, since the thing that breaks up relationships between two people is usually an excess of words.

Whisky 'Trust' Seen Calling Turn

By Drew Pearson

It's no secret that the big whisky trust has tremendous political influence, but few realized it was able to tell Senator Bob Taft what to do.

Pearson

However, that was what happened last Thursday, when the Republican majority held up the business of the Senate for 3 hours on orders from the whisky trust that the distillery grain-allocation bill had to be amended. The Republicans voted solidly to allocate most of the grain for distilling to the three big whisky companies which control the Distilled Spirits Institute—Seagrams, Hiram Walker and National Distillers. The first two of these are Canadian.

Hitherto, Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson has allocated grain based on a combination of each distiller's capacity and its past use. This gave a break to smaller and independent companies. The Senate Banking and Currency Committee had agreed unanimously that this formula was fair, and urged the Senate to let the Agriculture Department continue using this formula.

But the Senate Republicans voted solidly to overrule their own committee and laid down a new hand-picked formula, carefully selected to favor the whisky trust. This cuts down allocations to independent companies such as Schenley, Publicker and United which have never joined the whisky club known as the Distilled Spirits Institute.

Inside reason why the Senate Republicans overruled their own committee is that the whisky trust made it plain to Senator Cooper, a Republican from normally Democratic Kentucky, that he had to put across their formula if he wanted to be reelected. Bob Taft and the Senate Republicans are most anxious to save Cooper's seat for the GOP, so finally decided to go down the line for the whisky trust. Incidentially, Democratic Leader Alben Barkley, also from Kentucky, joined them.

Interesting sidelight is that Cooper's formula hurts 19 distilleries in his home State, while most of the distilleries which are helped belong to the Distilled Spirits Institute—the front for the whisky trust.

Still a Democrat

Significantly, a move to banish Senator Glen Taylor from the Democratic Party after he signed up with Henry Wallace was defeated recently inside Idaho's Democratic State Central Committee.

At a meeting in Boise, former Senator Charles Gossett and former State Democratic Chairman Robert Coulter tried to push through a resolution ruling Taylor out of the party.

After two hours of wrangling, Sam Hindman of Boise moved to adjourn without a vote. Hindman's motion carried 33 to 19.

Czech Secret Deal

When the secret documents on the Czech crisis are finally made known, it will be found that the State Department made one enormous effort to save the Czechs from the iron curtain. The attempt took place last July and here is the inside story.

When the Czech cabinet first heard about the Marshall Plan, they sent a secret emissary to see then Undersecretary of State Will Clayton in Geneva and informed him that Czechoslovakia wanted to line up with the West.

In the past, the Czech said, Washington regularly gave his government the brush-off, as, for instance, when Prague tried to buy 10 million dollars worth of seed wheat in the United States for cash. The offer was turned down cold; meanwhile, Russia gave the Czechs the wheat free. Accordingly, the Czech agent suggested to Clayton that the Truman Administration strengthen Benes and Masaryk with a real gesture of friendship.

Clayton said he was willing, and the Czech promptly proposed that the Export-Import Bank authorize a 50-million-dollar credit to Czechoslovakia. Clayton telephoned Washington, got the loan ok'd.

Meanwhile, however, Moscow began wielding the big stick, the Czech cabinet caved in, and Czechoslovakia pulled out of the Marshall Plan. When that happened, the State Department knew Czechoslovakia had lost the will to fight back.

Under the Dome

Russell Adams, director of the Civil Aeronautic Board's economic bureau and a career man, will replace CAB Member Harlee Branch . . . A movement to rebuild the badly disorganized Democratic Party in Michigan from the ground up will be launched by a group of young liberals. They include Assistant Secretary of Labor John Gibson; Hickman Price of Grand Rapids, vice president of Kaiser-Frazer; Wendell Lund, wartime industrial relations chief of the War Production Board; and Mennon Williams of the soap family . . . Those 20 Senators from coastal States, led by Warren Magnuson of Washington, Wayne Morse of Oregon and Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, who have been demanding a fisheries division in the State Department, soon will get their wish.

3d Party Moguls Meet

Henry Wallace and running mate, Senate Glen Taylor, met with their campaign managers behind closed doors last week to map third-party strategy.

They made tentative plans to hold their national convention in Chicago in June, and reviewed procedure for entering the party on the ballot in various States. Florida was the only State given up as hopeless.
